If Debts Were Cancelled How Is It, in Heaven? A Traffic Suggestion War Unites Capital

By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright, 1926, by Star Co.)

EUROPE IS INTERESTED in Senator Borah's suggestion. If war debts are cancelled, reparations, also, should be cancelled. France and England would modify the suggestion by making Germany pay the four billion dollar reparation, now secured by bonds on German railroads and industries.

WITH ALL DEBTS and all reparations wiped out, German industry would have an advantage over all nations. The death of the old mark wipes out Germany's internal debt automatically, as the drop in the franc has almost wiped out the French internal debt. Germany has practically no foreign debt, since there was no easy mark Uncle Sam to lend her billions in war time.

DEBT AND REPARATION cancellation would leave Germany and her industries free of debt, other nations loaded with foreign debts.

AS IT IS, Germany, after losing the war, is more prosperous than France and other nations that "won" the war.

In Paris, German travelers,

INTRUDERS BARRED AT HOSPITAL WHERE FILM STAR FIGHTS FOR LIFE

New York, Aug. 17.—As the afternoon wore on, Rudolph Valentino was reported to be in good spirits and recovering slowly. Talking with his manager, S. George Ullman, shortly after 3 o'clock the "sheik" remarked:

"I've gotten out of worse fixes than this. I'll soon be on my feet and working on our next picture."

Attending physicians announced that the famous screen "sheik" spent a restful night at Polyclinic Hospital and that there had been no developments today that would cause undue anxiety.

Valentino, who had been reported as very ill following a double operation on Sunday for gastric ulcer and appendicitis, is not regarded as out of danger, however.

At 10:30 this morning, attending

EDERLE DEFIES ALL; SULLIVAN CHALLENGES

Bissingen, Germany, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—Gertrude Ederle today told the Associated Press that she was prepared to take on all male and female challengers in a Channel swim for a purse of $20,000 before starting for the United States.

Lowell, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—Henry L. Sullivan of this city, the first American to swim across the English channel, made reply to Gertrude Ederle's challenge for a channel swim today. Mr. Sullivan said that he did not have the $20,000 available or, time to meet the requirements of Miss Ederle's challenge but that he stood ready to meet any man or woman who accepted the challenge which he issued in London immediately after his swim across the channel.

Sullivan's challenge was for a purse of $10,000 for a finish swim in the open ocean. He has repeated that challenge in every city of more than 60,000 population in the United States and Canada.

Cape Gris-Nez, France, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—Miss Lillian Cannon of Baltimore failed today in her first effort to swim the English Channel. A sudden storm forced her to quit the water after having been swimming for two hours and thirty-five minutes.

Dover, Eng., Aug. 17 (I.N.S.).—Miss Clara Belle Barrett, New York swimming instructress, will start her second attempt to swim the English Channel at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning if weather conditions are

OFFICIALS ARE SEIZED AS MEXICAN REBELS

Mexico City, Aug. 17.—Police, acting under orders of Governor Colunga of the State of Guanajuato have arrested all the members of the Legislature which attempted to establish itself at Celaya in opposition to the Legislature at Queretaro. Outlaws operating under Ezequiel Garcia, said to have been a Bonilard, have been dispersed by Federal troops. Garcia was killed when troops surrounded the band.

Mexico City, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—Some fifty persons, including a general in the Federal Army and all members of the City Council of the town of Amecameca have been taken into custody by the Federal authorities.

They are charged with having participated in a plot of wide ramifications for uprisings last Sunday against the government's religious regulations.

The general's name is withheld, but secret service officials say his is the first case of disaffection in the army thus far.

There are some suggestions in unofficial circles that the concentration of forces of General Enrique Estrada, near the Mexican border in

2 COURT FIGHTS BY RICKARD

New York, Aug. 17 (I.N.S.).—The Dempsey-Tex Rickard-License Committee wrangle will be taken into court.

Rickard said this afternoon that two court actions would be started at once against the license committee of the New York State Boxing Commission to demand why a license was denied to Jack Dempsey.

"I'm going to court," said Rickard. "This affair is not ended yet. The license committee must remember that they are not dealing with Tex Rickard but with a corporation (the Madison Square Garden Corporation).

"Two actions will be taken. One in the name of the corporation and one by Jack Dempsey. We had a meeting of the corporation and decided on court action. The lawyers are now preparing the papers. When they are ready, the action will start."

CITY OFFICIALS TO FACE O'BRIEN IN $2,000,000 CONTRACT INQUIRY

Mayor Nichols, Attorney Charles H. Innes and City Councillors Dowling, Parkman, Gilbody and Fitzgerald have been called before District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien to explain charges brought by certain contractors hinting at scandal.

According to the district attorney contracts have been entered into for paving, snow removing and other necessities which will cost the city of Boston some $2,000,000 in the next four years.

There has been conniving between certain contractors and certain public officials if the charges of the contractors are proved true, according to the district attorney.

Whether or not the matter will be placed before the Grand Jury now sitting depends on the decision of Judge Joseph Quinn. District Attorney O'Brien said he put that question to Chief Justice Hall of the Superior Court and the justice told him it was a question for Judge Quinn, now sitting, to determine.

Acting Mayor Charles G. Keese has already conferred with the district attorney regarding the alleged scandals. He was accompanied by his attorney, Herman Hormel.

Also the district attorney is awaiting a written report on the question by Guy Emerson, engineer for the city's finance commission.

The hints of scandal were first given to the light by the complaints of contractors who claim that even though their bids on contracts were lowest, other preferred contractors were chosen for the work in place of them.

One contractor, Frank R. McGrane, of Huntington avenue, not only made known his complaint by word of mouth, but issued and published a pamphlet in which he discusses the contract system and criticizes the city heads.

SEEK STAINS ON COAT SENT OFF BY MRS. HALL

Somerville, N. J., Aug. 17 (I.N.S.).—A sudden dramatic turn was given to the Hall-Mills murder investigation this afternoon when a surprise witness, William J. O'Rourke, told the court that at 8:30 on the fatal night he had seen three persons near the farm where the killings occurred.

"One woman," he said, "who resembled Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, was upbraiding another woman, who resembled Mrs. Eleanor Mills. Standing by was a man who looked to me like Dr. Hall."

O'Rourke, who is a contractor, was driving by in his car when he saw them.

Somerville, N. J., Aug. 17 (I.N.S.).—Testimony that a coat and scarf which were sent to Philadelphia to be dyed by Mrs. Frances S. Hall, widow of the slain clergyman, might have contained bloodstains which could not be noticed because of the nature of the fabric, was given today at the Hall-Mills murders investigation hearing by

WABAN MILLIONAIRE'S SON IS RESCUED AT SEA

Gordon White, eighteen-year-old son of Wilfred White, millionaire compass manufacturer of Boston and Waban, was rescued by the Coast Guard Patrol C-G 113 twelve miles off Beach Haven, N. J., according to radio messages received at the base today.

Roulwin Christopher Coles, commander of the patrol boat, reported the youth was unharmed, but the yacht tender in which he had been drifting eighteen hours was nearly filled with water and could not have been kept afloat much longer.

Coast guards scoured the sea off the Delaware Breakwater today in search of the boy who was adrift all through the night's terrific electrical storm in that vicinity. His craft was the tender of a cabin powerboat in which he was taking a vacation cruise.

His father, Wilfred C. White of Waban, said he was not told of his son's predicament and understood the yacht was at Philadelphia.

Young White was seen to pass the breaker line off Atlantic City in his half-submerged little craft.

The youth was one of a party of physicians issued this bulletin:

"Mr. Valentino passed a fairly comfortable night. There has been no change to cause undue anxiety. Temperature 101.5, pulse 100, respiration 22."

A private detective was stationed outside the screen star's suite after an admirer, an unidentified man, had sought to make his way in, contrary to orders issued by hospital authorities.

Dr. Harold Meeker said morphine had been administered to alleviate the patient's pain.

Valentino's comfortable night is understood to have exceeded the hopes of his doctors whose ominous bulletins had caused grave alarm.

Norma Talmadge called at the hospital today, but Valentino was asleep, and she said she would return later. She was accompanied by her husband, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of the United Artists, Inc.

Schenck revealed that Valentino's death would mean a loss to his company of between $2,000,000 and $4,000,000. Schenck carries $1,000,000 insurance on Valentino's life.

Newspaper men were ordered out of the hospital shortly before noon, but later readmitted. Hospital officials said the routine of the institution had been disturbed since Valentino's illness. Large numbers of persons, including many young girls, have called there. Many have left flowers for the patient. Messages by phone, telegraph and radio continue pouring in.

Attending physicians announced that no further bulletins would be issued on Valentino's condition until 6 o'clock this evening.

Shortly after noon, when reporters were readmitted, it was said unofficially that Valentino was resting as comfortably as could be expected.

New York, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—Rudolph Valentino, smoky of the silver screen, was fighting desperately for his $1,000,000 life today in a bower of roses at the Polyclinic Hospital.

His physicians have revealed that local perforations had already developed when the film star was operated on Sunday night for appendicitis and a gastric ulcer. The peritonial poisoning, doctors said, usually becomes general and when it does the patient dies.

Among telegrams of sympathy was one from Jack Dempsey and his wife, Estelle Taylor, of screenland. Pola Negri, who announced recently that she was engaged to Valentino on trial, said in Los Angeles that she would take the first train to New York to see him after she finished the picture on which she is working.

TAILOR PREFERRED DEATH TO ILLNESS

Worcester, Aug. 17.—Jacob Rosenthal, victim of ill health, attempted suicide by gas in his tailor shop on Franklin street today. His son, Raymond, discovered him unconscious in a back room of the shop, the gas tube dangling above his face.

Quick work with the oxygen tank by Dr. Richard J. Shanahan brought the man to consciousness. He will recover.

RICH WABAN BOY 'LOST' AT SEA

thirteen students of the Tabor Academy, Marion, Mass., who started out two weeks ago in the preparatory school's cabin cruiser, Tabor Boy, a 36-foot power boat.

Yesterday afternoon they set out with Captain Nelson Weeks in command, for the Delaware Breakwater.

FORCED TO TURN BACK.

Several miles out at sea they encountered engine trouble and were forced to turn back. As they neared the inlet, young White offered to bail out the tender boat which was half swamped by the heavy seas. The youth managed to climb into the tender and was busily engaged in bailing the water out of it when the storm came up and snapped the tow line.

Darkness was settling down upon the turbulent waters and the Tabor boy was in the narrow channel alongside the inlet sandbar when the cry arose from fellow students that White was adrift in the storm. Capt. Weeks was unable to turn his vessel around. There was nothing they could do to help the youth in the half submerged tender.

COAST GUARDS START SEARCH.

Continuing into port, Capt. Weeks notified the coast guards of the boy's plight, and several lifeboats were launched into the teeth of the gale and downpour. The coast guards made a heroic effort, but found themselves helpless and were forced to turn back after an hour's futile struggle to get beyond the breaker line.

Early today, the sea had subsided, and the coast guards renewed their search for the lost youth. A lifeboat, in command of Chief Petty Officer Robart, manned by half a dozen surf men, made out of the inlet station, and another in command of Capt. Gus Hickman, similarly manned, made out of Little Egg Harbor station. They were later augmented by other patrol boats.

All of the students on the Tabor Boy were members of socially prominent New England families.

KEEPING WHITE HOUSE COOL FOR COOLIDGES

Washington, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—The history of the White House has been brought ahead of the history of refrigeration. Repairs and remodeling operations which have been in progress since the President and Mrs. Coolidge left for their Summer vacation now include the installation of electric refrigeration to replace artificial ice in the two-year-old icebox.

R. I. Boat Hits Lightship

Old Lyme, Ct., Aug. 17 (A.P.)—Coastwise Steel Liner Bristol, off Connecticut River mouth to Long Island Sound, was hit by the freight steamer Boston, from Providence to New York Friday night, it became known today. The lightship was reported undamaged.

"MUST BE DEAD," SAID MRS. HALL TO MILLS

SLAIN WOMAN'S HUSBAND IN COURT

James Mills, meek and to all appearances little interested in the murder hearing, testified to what Mrs. Hall told him twenty-four hours before the bodies of Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills were found.

BURY 'MOTHER' FAIRBANKS

More than 200 mothers and children were present today in Lothrop Hall at funeral services for Miss Elsie E. Fairbanks, late superintendent of the City Temporary Home on Chardon street.

Miss Fairbanks for years toiled among the unfortunate and was known as "The West End Mother of the Poor." She died at the Bay State Hospital last Saturday.

The Rev. James T. Rider, assistant pastor of Tremont Temple, officiated at the funeral. Miss S. Bennett, social worker at the Ruggles Street Church, made the address. Miss Linda Marston rendered several musical selections.

Interment was at Holliston.

LOST, BUT GIRLS HAD CANDY

While relatives and other searchers were conducting a frantic search for them, Miss Louise M. Gowell and Carolyn M. Schade of Newton, hopelessly lost in the Maine woods near Greenville, Me., huddled close to a small fire through the long hours of the night, and munched chocolates.

When morning came, experienced woodsmen, headed by Deputy Adelbert G. Rogers scoured the woods and found the girls near Grenell Pond. The girls who are spending a few days at Kamp Cosey at Wilson Pond started out to find "Secret Pond," but lost the trail. After vainly trying to find their way back to camp, the girls kindled a fire and bided their time until morning.

The girls staved off hunger with a package of chocolate.

PROBE BURIAL IN HALL MURDER

Charles Collins, detective, who worked on the original probe.

Collins was a Middlesex County detective in 1923, at the time the murders were committed.

He informed Senator Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor, that on September 20, 1923, he had been sent to Philadelphia to check up on a brown or tan coat and scarf which Mrs. Hall had sent to that city to be dyed black.

MIGHT NOT SHOW.

He testified that he had questioned the proprietor of the dyeing establishment. The proprietor had said that there appeared to be no blodstains on the coat and scarf when it was received for cleaning, but that it was possible that the articles bore such stains which would be unnoticeable because of the texture of the fabric.

The proprietor said also, according to Collins, that it was the first time he had been given work to do by Mrs. Hall.

A conference between Simpson and Inspector Underwood delayed the opening of the investigation somewhat today. Collins was the first witness to be heard, but the second witness called.

The first witness called was Dr. T. J. Heahy, senior coroner of Somerset County at the time of the murders. Dr. Leahy did not respond.

DETAILS OF BURIAL

It was indicated that the special prosecutor would devote a large part of the day's proceedings to investigating the details of the burial of Dr. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills, slain chorister. In this connection it was probable that Barbara Tough, maid in the Hall household, and others would be called to testify.

The mysterious disappearance of a pair of gardener's shears, believed to have been used to slit the throat of Mrs. Mills, was also to be investigated.

The room was crowded this morning. Many of the spectators brought lunches. "Willie" Stevens and Henry Carpender, charged with the murder of the Rev. Dr. Hall, entered the room in jocular mood. They were smiling and Stevens waved his hand gaily to acquaintances scattered about the room.

The earlier stages of the hearing today were punctuated by sharp clashes between Prosecutor Simpson and Robert H. McCarter, chief of defense counsel.

COAT IMMATERIAL.

As soon as Collins took the stand McCarter contended that the report of Collins' finding at the dyeing establishment in Philadelphia was immaterial.

Collins said he was informed that Mrs. Hall had never sent anything to the Philadelphia establishment before, but Attorney Pfeiffer here interjected the remark that he understood that Mrs. Hall had previously sent things through Mrs. Carpender.

The next man on the stand was Detective David, who testified that at the time the coat and scarf were sent to Philadelphia there were at least four agencies of dyeing establishments within eight blocks of the Hall home.

Senator Simpson then held up a pair of gold-rimmed eyeglasses, which David identified as those which had been found carefully placed on Dr. Hall's nose.

NO FINGER MARKS.

"There never was a fingermark on them," he said. "It has always been a question in my mind if the spots were blood spots or specks made by flies."

The detective then identified the blood-stained clothing which had been removed from Hall's body. A pair of cuff links were missing. He said that Mrs. Hall had applied for the cuff links, which she said were keepsakes, but that her application had been denied.

WOUNDS DESCRIBED.

The next witness was Dr. William H. Long, county physician at the time of the murders. He described the wounds on the bodies. Long told the court that he had given a permit for removal of the body of Dr. Hall to Middlesex County, and that the body had then been buried, although he never had given a burial permit.

An autopsy was performed ten days later, he said. When asked why an inquest never was held, he said that was up to the prosecutor who had not ordered one.

MADE BY HAND.

After describing the bullet wounds, and the cut through Mrs. Mills' throat, Long was asked if he had noted any abrasions.

"Yes," he said, "Mrs. Mills' right arm, from the shoulder to the wrist, was bruised, also the left elbow. I could not tell if there were any marks on the face. The bruises were possibly made by a hand."

The bodies had been disturbed after the killing, Dr. Long said, as no two people could have been murdered in that position.

Raymond Schneider, the youth who, with Pearl Sahmer, found the bodies, was the next witness. He described the position of the bodies and said that Dr. Hall's face was covered by a hat, while Mrs. Mills was covered by her scarf.

Schneider testified that neither he nor Pearl had again visited the murder spot.

Captain John W. Underwood of the Jersey City police was the first witness at the afternoon session. He described his arrest of Willie Stevens and Carpender.

"I went to the Hall home and told Stevens he was under arrest," he said. "He sat down and began to cry, his head on his arms. 'I knew it would come to this,' he said.

"Carpender's only comment was to say that he was in Highland Park on the night of the murder. He said he had a good reason not to tell how he knew it."

Miss Gladys Posselt, concert pianist and composer, will soon become Mrs. Emmanuel Carl Ondricek, violinist. They both have studios on Gainsboro street. They were disappointed when told in Providence that their marriage would have to be published.

FIND BODY OF GIRL IN POND

The body of Jane Frances Macbeth, twenty-eight, missing from her home, No. 9 Storey street, Cambridge, since Monday was found today in the Fresh Pond Reservoir, Cambridge.

Daniel Mahley, an employe of the reservoir, discovered the effects of the girl on the shore of the pond this morning.

The Cambridge police were notified and started dragging for the body, which they found about ten feet from the shore.

The girl was despondent and in ill health.

CONFESSED ADOPTING HEIRESS ROLE

McCormick Protege Invented Turkish Harem Tales, Says Ex-Boarding Mistress

By SEVERANCE JOHNSON,
Copyright, 1926, by Universal Service and the Chicago Herald and Examiner.
(Reproduction in whole or in part, prohibited.)

Chicago, Aug. 17.—"I cannot wear this awful mask any longer, I am not the daughter of a Turkish sultan.

"I was not the wife of Enver Phasha. I never possessed a fortune of diamonds and other costly gifts from Turkish royalty. I never escaped from any Turkish harem. All that is the mask which I now tear off.

"I am only a poor girl of Chicago's West Side, so poor that I have almost died from hunger in the street."

Such was the confession of Carmen Sylvano, befriended by Harold F. McCormick, who is now being sued by her husband to recover an alleged $5,000,000 estate held, it is charged in the suit, by Mr. McCormick in trust since the woman's death.

The confession was made to a woman in whose home she lived in Sheridan road in the Winter of 1919 and 1920, according to a statement of this woman to the Chicago Herald and Examiner.

"I PITIED HER"

"Carmen came to me, an utter stranger," the woman said. "She was introduced by a married woman with whom she had lived after she left Oak Forest Infirmary. I pitied her. I could see she was ill—ill of body and ill of soul—that beneath her gaiety and vivacity there was a strange undercurrent of melancholy and morbidness.

"It was in November, 1919, that she came to me. At first she grew reticent when I asked her about her father and her mother. Then little by little she opened her heart.

"She began to tell me strange stories of her early life in Turkey. She said she was the daughter of Mohammed VI, the last Sultan of Turkey. She said she had lived all her girlhood in a Turkish harem, guarded by eunuchs against escape. She had borne a child, which was taken away from her and placed in the custody of attendants in the men's quarters of the palace.

"Another time Carmen came running into my room, her eyes bulging as if with terror, her arms extended towards me, as if she would fall before she could reach me.

"Oh, you will protect me, won't you?' she cried. 'You won't let them get me. They will kill me if ever they lay hands upon me.'

"After her hysteria passed, she explained that Turkish agents were after her. She said she had gone to the men's quarters in quest of her babe, although such action was punishable with death according to the Turkish code. She had found

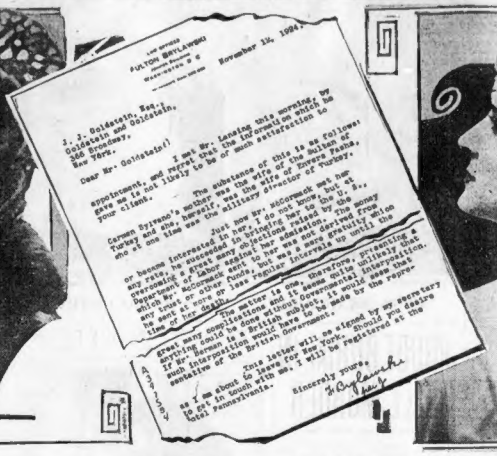
HAROLD M'CORMICK, HIS WIFE AND ORIENTAL BEAUTY HE AIDED IN HER THRONE CLAIMS



Fulton Brylawski
Washington D. C.
November 12, 1924.

J. J. Goldstein, Esq.,
Goldstein and Goldstein,
666 Broadway,
New York.

Dear Mr. Goldstein:

I met Mr. Leaving this morning, he gave me to understand that the interests he represents would prefer to be of much satisfaction to your client.

appointment, and regret that the substance of this to as follows: The substance of this to as follows: Carmen Sylvano's mother was the wife of a military officer, herself, was the wife of Enver Pasha, Turkey and she, herself, was the wife of Enver Pasha, and at one time was the military minister of Turkey.

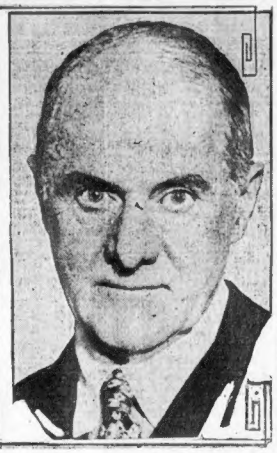
or became interested in Carmen Sylvano, Mr. McCormick met her over a year ago. Carmen was then living with her mother, Mrs. Sylvano, at 4000 Sheridan road, Chicago. Mr. McCormick was at once interested in her, and has continued to be so. Carmen is a beautiful girl, and has a very attractive personality. Mr. McCormick has not advanced her any sums of money or funds, but has given her certain articles of jewelry and has paid her regular living expenses.

Carmen Sylvano is now, therefore, pretending to be very much annoyed and disturbed, and claims that Mr. McCormick is persecuting her. Mr. McCormick has not persecuted her in any way, but has merely refused to be blackmailed by her. Under the circumstances, Mr. McCormick feels that any suit or action taken by Carmen Sylvano would be without any foundation in fact or in law, and that it would be a waste of time for Carmen Sylvano to undertake any such suit or action.

Great care should be taken in connection with this matter, and it would be well for Mr. McCormick to have counsel in Chicago look after his interests in the matter, as it is a British subject, and it would be necessary to get the consent of the British Government. Mr. McCormick is a British subject, and it would be necessary to get the consent of the British Government.

Any further communications that you may have to make in this matter will be signed by my secretary and forwarded to me for my signature. I will be registered at the Shoreham Hotel, Washington, D. C., and you can get in touch with me. I will be registered at the Shoreham Hotel, Washington, D. C., and you can get in touch with me. I will be registered at the Shoreham Hotel, Washington, D. C., and you can get in touch with me.

Sincerely yours,
Fulton Brylawski



CARMEN SYLVANO
Harold McCormick, harvester king, lavished a fortune on the Oriental beauty in the belief she was heiress to the Otterman throne. Robert Lansing, ex-Secretary of State, helped in tracing her record.

LETTER EXPRESSES LANSING'S BELIEF

GANNA WALSKA
The present Mrs. Harold McCormick married the harvester king in August, 1922, and McCormick is said to have been interested in Carmen's claim as early as 1920.

HAROLD F. McCORMICK
He must appear before Surrogate Court in New York in October in a $5,000,000 suit brought by Sidney Berman who married Carmen Sylvano in 1921.

FOUR ESCAPE IN GAS TORCH FIRE

Four workmen barely escaped injury and nearly a dozen office workers groped their way to the street through thick smoke today when a gas torch ignited fumes from an oil tank in the basement of the two-story brick Kollegian Building, Union square, Somerville.

The workmen were engaged in renovating an oil tank, part of a heating plant, under Nos. 10 and 11 Union square. The workmen fled to safety as the tank burst into flames and sent heavy clouds of black oil smoke billowing through the building.

Workers in the Hudson-Essex salesroom on the first floor and in the law offices of Alderman Ernest C. Carr, on the second floor, reached the street, after making their way through a suffocating smudge.

Miss Helen Gavin of Berkeley street, Somerville, a stenographer in the Carr law office, was among those driven out. A number of girls in the branch office of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, on the second floor, stuck to their posts when calmed by firemen. The blaze was confined to the basement of the building. Damage is estimated at $200.

Woman's Curse Over Candy Kid Prosecutors

Baltimore, Aug. 17 (I.N.S.).—A woman's curse, bitter and from the heart, hung today over the heads of all those who had anything to do with the conviction and execution of Richard R. Whittemore, who went to the gallows with a sneer on his lips.

It came from Mrs. Theresa Messler, the bandit's mother-in-law.

"I hope his spirit returns and will come between the lips of the men who did this and between the lips of their wives, too, for they would not permit Reese to kiss his wife good-bye. I am an old woman, but this comes from the heart."

Killed by Heat

Palmer, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—James A. MacAuley, 60, flagman on the Boston & Albany at Thorndike, died today from the effects of heat prostration suffered during the recent hot weather.

LAW SNATCHES BRIDEGROOM

Just as the first day of his wedded life began for Cornelius Reardon of Freeport street, Dorchester, the long arm of the stern law reached into the house, plucked young Reardon from his bride, and dragged him into Dorchester court to face the charge of being father to the child born to Alice A. McChesney of Stafford street, Roxbury.

A distracted wife of an hour, the girl who was Anna McGrath of Dorchester saw her husband led away from her to spend the hours until court session in a cell.

Today the young bride, tearful and hardly comprehending what had happened, faced in the court-room "the other woman," who held her new-born baby in her arms.

The case was continued at the request of the prosecuting officer, Patrolman George E. Boyden.

Reardon and the McGrath girl were married last night. After the marriage there was a reception at the Reardon home, which continued until the small hours.

The new Mrs. Reardon, a winsome-eyed blonde girl of 20, was serene in her trust and faith in her husband.

"I know this other girl's charge is not true," she said proudly. "My husband loves me and has loved me alone for more than two years.

"The baby is more than a year old. It would seem rather late for this girl to put in her claim.

"When they were taking my husband away early today he told me the charge was absolutely false, and he doesn't even know this girl, and I believe him absolutely."

BRIDE OF A DAY WHO MUST FACE "OTHER WOMAN"

HER HUSBAND SNATCHED AWAY
Mrs. Anna Reardon of Dorchester had been married to Cornelius Reardon only a few hours when the "other woman" in the person of Alice A. McChesney of Roxbury, through the law, snatched him away from his bride, charging he was the father of her child. The bride says she will stick to her husband, and is sure there is no "other woman" for Cornelius.

CURRAN DEFIES KELIHER

George E. Curran, candidate for the Democratic nomination for sheriff of Suffolk County, announced today he will accept the debate challenge of Sheriff John A. Keliher if the sheriff can prove he is a Democrat and will publicly renounce the Republican party.

"I am not going to be the ladder by which Republican candidates can get into Democratic rallies," Councillor Curran declared. "If Mr. Keliher will prove he is a Democrat and will renounce all Republican candidates I will meet him. I will not follow him into Republican meetings."

Sheriff Keliher, addressing a gathering at the home of Walter Snow, No. 718 Dudley street, Roxbury, said:

"I have proved that Mr. Curran has never been above the first floor of the jail. In all the agitation in behalf of sadly needed improvements at Charles street I never met Mr. Curran once or received from him in any way, whatsoever, a bit of support or encouragement. There are those who talk humanity and those who practice it."

William E. Anderson of No. 15 Southwood street, Roxbury, president of the Charlestown Men of Owls, No. 1469, announced that the organization unanimously endorsed Sheriff Keliher for another term.

Daniel W. Harrington, president of the Law and Order League, Inc., and candidate for sheriff, in conformity with the law today filed his campaign committee with Secretary of State Cook. The committee is called the "Daniel W. Harrington Veterans' Defence Committee."

At a gathering of his workers at the French Club in Chelsea on Clinton street, Max Waldo Cohen, candidate for Congress in the Ninth District, spoke as follows:

"I call upon the wage-earners, small business men and the great masses of the people, who stand for freedom, justice and human progress, to rally in this campaign, to the end that the representative of reaction and the special interests may be defeated and the faithful friend and servant of the people elected."

EVERETT HUNTS LONE WOLF

A negro "lone wolf" who is reported by the police to have frightened four Everett women and attacked one of them in his prowlings was being hunted today in Everett and adjoining cities.

One of the women, Mrs. Rita Strasser of No. 12 West street, gave battle bravely to the prowler when she awoke to find him opening the window of her bedroom. She grasped him by the leg and held on while he pummeled her with his fists. Finally he broke loose and fled through the window.

At the home of the family of John Lohnes in Main street ,he prowled through the house while little Leah Lohnes, daughter of the family, slept unbothered. He was discovered in the kitchen and ran from the house.

Two other women saw a man sneaking around their houses and the descriptions they gave the police tallied with those given by Mrs. Strasser and the Lohnes family.

MARRIED TWICE, SAYS 'CRAZY'

Worcester, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—Married twice and on each occasion while he was insane, and therefore incapable of being legally wed, is the claim of Charles R. Elbey of this city who has filed in probate court a petition for the annulment of both marriages.

He further sets forth in his petition that the woman to whom he was first married was legally incompetent to wed as she had been married previously and never granted a divorce.

On his second marriage he says he was not only insane, but was not legally separated from his first wife, as he had not been divorced.

He states he first was illegally married to May Corinne Phillips in this city Oct. 19, 1921, and that her present place of abode is unknown to him. He says they lived together one week when she deserted him.

He sets forth his second illegal marriage venture was on Sept. 14, 1926 in Skowhegan, Me., with Gladys Wilson of Cambridge. At that time, he says a conservator was conducting his affairs.

GEORGE ADE UNDER SURVEY IN HOSPITAL

Chicago, Aug. 17 (I.N.S.).—George Ade, internationally known writer, is in St. Luke's Hospital here today undergoing treatment for a minor ailment.

B. U. MAN AIDS SAFETY DRIVE

Word was received here today of the appointment of Prof. Ralph G. Wells of Boston University to direct field investigation in Massachusetts in a nation-wide survey by the American Engineering Council, which seeks to check the growing number of industrial accidents in this country.

It is understood the Council's study of safety and production is now proceeding in Boston, New Haven, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Buffalo, New York, Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Grand Rapids, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Atlanta and other centres.

In the national survey 3,000 industrial plants, including ten basic industries, will be investigated.

POISONED GIRL DISAPPEARS

Following an attempt at suicide by swallowing an antiseptic, an unidentified girl, taken to the City Hospital in a semi-conscious condition today gave the name of another young woman, a resident of South Boston, and then left the hospital.

Picked up in a state of collapse by John Sweeney on Concord street, South End, the girl on arrival at the hospital gave her name as Mary Mahan and her address as No. 248 West Fourth street, South Boston.

When a reporter for the Boston Evening American called at that address he was told by Mrs. Joseph Mahan that her daughter Mary was asleep in bed. Aroused, the young woman made her appearance and readily proved that she had been at home all night.

KILLED GIRL "TO SEE WHAT IT WAS LIKE"

Greenville, Tenn., Aug. 17 (I.N.S.).—Mrs. Alma Tipton and her husband, Robert Tipton, were held in jail today on charges of murder in connection with the killing of little Novella Winkle, a thirteen-year-old orphan, who made her home with the couple.

Mrs. Tipton confessed that she hacked the child's head from her body with an axe, "because I have always wanted to kill somebody to see what it was like."

Officers expressed the belief that Mrs. Tipton may have confessed the crime to shield her husband.

BRITISH MINERS MOVE TO END COAL STRIKE

London, Aug. 17 (I.N.S.).—The miners' committees in session here today instructed the executive to open negotiations with the operators and the government, in an effort to end the coal strike.

Moscow, Aug. 17 (I.N.S.).—The Soviet Trade Union Council has sent another $200,000 to England for the aid of the striking British coal miners.

AMERICAN GIRL CHANNEL CONQUEROR CREATES GREAT INTEREST AMONG THE BRITISHERS

PAYS HER RESPECTS TO CAPT. WEBB
Gertrude Ederle, champion of the English Channel, is here seen standing by the monument at Folkestone, erected to the memory of that other great swimmer.

FLOCKING TO CATCH A GLIMPSE OF "TRUDY"
Crowds gathered around the doors and waited outside the hotel in Dover, where the famous girl stopped after her great achievement. (Photos by I.N.R.)

ENJOYING CONGRATULATORY TELEGRAMS
Miss Ederle, in her swimming togs, is reading kind words sent her from all over the world. She is in a room at the Dover hotel and does not appear to be disturbed by the curious crowd outside the window.

BURGESS SAYS EDERLE MADE GOOD, CLEAN SWIM

Cape Gris Nez, Aug. 17 (I.N.S.)—"Bill" Burgess, who himself conquered the English Channel and has trained many other aspirants, including Gertrude Ederle, proved himself a thoroughgoing sportsman today when he came to the defense of "Trudie," despite the fact that "Bill" admits he is disappointed and hurt because he feels that Gertrude hasn't appreciated his efforts.

"It was a good clean swim," said Burgett when told of the adverse comment of certain English newspapers. "I will take an oath on it any time.

"Miss Ederle got over. I got my pay—no bonus, just an old rowboat that wasn't usable anyway, so have no further interest in the matter.

"But, as a matter of fact, if they say the second tug protected her from the Channel they are wrong. As a matter of fact the second tug hindered rather than helped her. The backwash from this tug was most annoying."

Tug Hampered 'Trudie's' Efforts, Swimmers Say

Cape Gris-Nez, France, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—News of the criticisms and comments in the British press concerning the record-breaking Channel swim of Gertrude Ederle has aroused condemnation by the Channel swimming colony here as fountainous and utterly inaccurate.

One tug alone convoyed Miss Ederle, while the other carried cameramen and reporters. Far from assisting the American swimmer, as had been intimated in criticism of her swim, the tug is reported to have impeded her progress several times.

Forty-one witnesses followed Miss Ederle's attempt and they have indicated that the swim was carried out in accordance with every precedent. The Associated Press correspondent, who has been present at twenty-nine Channel starts, can testify that Miss Ederle's was accomplished under absolutely the same conditions as previous ones.

well supplied with money, arrive at the rate of 5,000 a day, staying on the average about a week, and outnumbering the British and Americans combined.

FRANCE IS EXPECTED to suggest that all war debts and reparations be cancelled, except the German reparation bill. It is suggested not too honestly that Uncle Sam might get the German payment of four billions in full for all his claims, if, as and when paid. If that arrangement were made, Germany would find a reason for not paying. She is paying now because she is disarmed, and has the French army and French flying machines next door. Uncle Sam, 3,000 miles away, would not worry her. Every one knows that this country would not go to war to collect a debt.

AND IF UNCLE SAM did go to war against Germany, which is inconceivable, it would delight the sense of humor to see how our dear brothers in arms of 1917 would all side with Germany. How surprised the great and good Woodrow Wilson would be if he could come back and find all of the wars hatreds replaced by one universal and enthusiastic hatred of the United States. He little expected that, when the King met him at the railroad station and took him to sleep in Buckingham Palace, or when Italian enthusiasts put his portrait on the wall, next to Garibaldi's.

ON SUNDAY, 60,000 visiting the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia studied exhibits from many States and foreign countries, latest machinery, inventions, devices to increase happiness and diminish misery among human beings.

AND MANY SINCERE men and women believe that the 60,000 ought to go to hell, or close to it, for "violating the Sabbath." What do they think happens in Heaven on Sunday? Are the harps silenced, the strange and interesting beasts, described in Revelations, caged up for the day, the dignified and industrious elders ordered to stop their bowing down, until Monday morning?

How can a Christian, Mohammedan, Shintoist or Buddhist spend Sunday better than studying a combination of man's works and Creator's beneficence?

BIG CITIES, struggling with suburban traffic problems, neglect one possibility that interests the very able President Smith of the New York Central railroad. The plan was to erect viaducts above railroad tracks, running through thickly populated suburbs. New York's transit commission suggests that omnibus lines carry suburbanites to the waterfront, load them on fast boats that would transfer them to other omnibusses. A thousand times better, simpler, quicker would be a viaduct over railroads reaching populous urban districts.

PASSENGER OMNIBUSES, motor trucks, for short hauls, and private automobiles could use the viaducts. The railroads to be fairly compensated for use of its right of way. It might own, or tax passenger and freight automobiles, greatly increasing revenues.

RAMSAY MACDONALD, former Labor Prime Minister of Great Britain, asks American Labor to aid striking British coal miners. The response will be slight, probably. Capital, dealing with labor, has the advantage that helps Britain to manage its 800,000,000 subjects in India. They disagree with each other violently on questions of religion and are too busy hating each other to combine against Britain.

Our Labor disagrees violently with Foreign Labors on questions of policy. And each belief hates the other. American Labor disagrees with the British theory that Labor should be in politics. British and American Labor disagree with and hate Russian labor ideas. And Capital is internationally harmonious. That makes government of this industrial era quite simple.

suitable, she announced today. Miss Barrett swam twenty-one hours on her last attempt and then she was defeated only by the weather. On this second attempt she declares she won't stop swimming until she reaches the shores of France.

RUM BOATS BRING GOOD PRICES AT U. S. AUCTION

Bargains in boats, gasoline and car-propelled, drew a crowd of 100 to the Army Base, South Boston, today where a public auction of captured rum-runners and one rum chaser was conducted under the authority of the U. S. Treasury Department.

A speed boat, the property of the local U. S. Customs headquarters, valued at $1100, was sold to D. J. McNeal of Chelsea for $1,000, while Galus Walls of Shawmut avenue, South End, became possessor of the "Katherine B," a former rum-runner, for $170. Four dories also went under the hammer, their prices ranging from $11.50 to $36.

KILLS 2 IN FIGHT FOR LIFE AND GOLD MINE

Merced, Calif., Aug. 17 (A.P.)—Paul Baran, fifty-one, a veteran of the gold camps, matched marksmanship with three men during a quarrel over a mining claim and won. Today he faces two charges of murder and possibly three.

"They killed my dog, and they threatened to kill me, so when I saw them coming up to my cabin with a rifle I opened fire," he told officers. "It was a case of 'shoot an' shoot quick so I let them have it."

WILL GREET KIN AFTER 21 YEARS

On their golden honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Zalman Westerman, of Portland, Ore., will arrive in Boston, Thursday, to visit their nephews. Mr. Westerman is 71 and his wife is 68. This is their first visit to Boston.

For many years Mr. and Mrs. Westerman have talked of visiting Boston and their nephews, whom they have not seen for twenty-one years, when the nephews visited them in Oregon.

But whenever the trip was mentioned Mr. Westerman would always say: "Let's wait until our golden honeymoon comes, and then we will go to Boston."

Mr. and Mrs. Westerman will visit the home of William Westerman at No. 14 Helen street, Dorchester. Two other nephews live in Greater Boston; Jacob Westerman, of Chelsea, and Abraham L. Westerman, of No. 82 Irving street, Everett.

Mr. and Mrs. Westerman were born in the Baltic Provinces of Russia. They were married there fifty years ago August 1. Forty years ago they came to the United States, settling in Kansas City. Thirty-five years ago they went to Portland, Ore. Mr. Westerman has just retired from his grocery business in Portland, leaving it to his sons.

GIVES $3,000,000 FOR INDUSTRIAL MUSEUM

Chicago, Aug. 17 (A.P.)—A twenty million dollar industrial museum, depicting the advancing achievements of man's ingenuity through the ages, has been started toward reality here by Julius Rosenwald, already widely known for his philanthropies.

The enterprise is the crystallization of a dream which came during the recent visit of Mr. Rosenwald to the historic institution at Munich, Germany. Before a group of financial, industrial and civic leaders who were his guests the philanthropist unfolded his plan and announced a gift of $3,000,000 toward its realization.

ESTRADA FACES POSSIBILITY OF BEING SHOT

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 17 (A.P.)—Desire for wealth and power and not concern for Mexico's religious plight was the moving force behind the plot of Gen. Enrique Estrada and his associates to overthrow the government of Lower California, officials of that State believe.

The plot failed when agents of the United States Department of Justice and county and city officials of Southern California took 170 men into custody with a large quantity of arms and ammunition.

"When one realizes the tremendous revenue that will begin coming in next month in the Mexican district, when more than 150,000 acres of cotton are brought to gins, it is easy to understand the stakes for which Estrada was playing," Alfonso Pellegrin, secretary to Governor Abelardo Rodriguez, said in a message received here from Mexico.

The possibility that some of the ringleaders would face a firing squad also loomed. Conviction on any of the charges against them of violating the neutrality of the United States would warrant deportation and once in Mexico, they would receive little sympathy from the Mexican authorities.

General Estrada, former Secretary of War of Mexico, still refuses to discuss the revolutionary attempt.

The last outward sign of the proposed march on Lower California vanished when 300 Mexicans, gathered in Imperial Valley, under the guise of laborers, disbanded.

Only American Pastor to Quit Church in Mexico

Mexico City, Aug. 17 (A.P.)—The only American citizen, who is the pastor of a church in Mexico City, the Rev. William Evans Thomas of the Union Evangelical Church, has presented his resignation to the officials of the church and will depart in a few days for Pittsburgh, his home. He says his usefulness has ended in Mexico, as he cannot function as a pastor under the government's religious regulations.

The other American church here, the Episcopal Christ Church Cathedral is under the pastorate of a British subject, Dean Peacock, who has not officiated for months. Lay readers have been conducting services since Dean Peacock promised to cease officiating when the government ordered him expelled for violating the constitution, which forbids foreign ministers to conduct church services.

KING BORIS RETURNS TO SOFIA FROM GENEVA

Paris, Aug. 17 (A.P.)—A Havas dispatch from Sofia says that King Boris has returned from his incognito trip to Switzerland.

King Boris, young bachelor monarch of Bulgaria, left his capital in July on what was described as a matrimonial errand, accompanied by his sister, Princess Eudoxie. Traveling as Count Rilski, he went to Geneva, Lucerne and other Swiss cities. He was last reported on August 3 as leaving Geneva for Territet, Switzerland, driving his own auto.

A dispatch from Geneva, July 26, said King Boris' engagement to Princess Giovanna, third daughter of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, was "considered an accomplished fact."

50 CITY OFFICIALS HELD AS PLOTTERS IN MEXICO

California with the alleged purpose of crossing the frontier into Mexico, may have been connected with the alleged plot and as part of a general revolutionary movement.

The Catholic episcopate said it was known that a number of Catholic leaders had been arrested, but that it was understood the police were searching their homes for missing church treasures.

It also stated that no information of any uprising having been planned by Catholics in opposition to the religious regulations had been obtained. It was pointed out that the church authorities had announced on several occasions that the attitude of the church was a peaceful one, and that no uprising against the State was contemplated.

Today the police announced that eight of those arrested had been released. No reason was given for setting them free. It was said by the police officials that in some Catholic homes they had found dynamite and rifles and also documentary evidence showing that an uprising had been planned.

SUSPECTED OF PLOT.

According to the police, some of the Catholics arrested in the suburb of San Angel Sunday when disorders occurred at the Church of San Jacinto between communicants and the police, were suspected of attempting to hide important documents dealing with the reported attempt at revolt. Previously the police had asserted that they had found no arms or ammunition or evidence that an uprising was being planned in San Angel.

It is now claimed by police that they found and seized anti-government propaganda and manifestoes for rebellion in the residence of Senora Josefina Novoa, described as the president of the San Angel branch of the League for the Defense of religious liberty. The Senora is among those now under arrest.

A Catholic priest, Father Octaviano Rodriguez, another of those arrested, was living in a house at Coyoacan where, police, say, propaganda also was found.

Generally the religious situation remains unchanged, but the economic boycott called by the League for the Defense of Religious Liberty in protest against the government's regulations seems to be increasing. Many Catholics are waiting hopefully for the convening of Congress, September 1, and the enactment of milder church regulations. The hope seemingly is a forlorn one.

No further disturbance has been reported since the fight between the police and Catholics Sunday at San Angel, in which numerous heads on both sides were broken.

Mexico Plans to Demand Extradition of Rebels

San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 17 (A.P.)—The San Antonio Light says today that Mexico will ask the United States for the extradition of Adolfo De La Huerta, former provisional president of Mexico; Enrique Estrada, now in jail at San Diego, Cal., as alleged leader of a revolt against Lower California, and all leaders who participated in the De La Huerta revolution in 1923.

The paper quotes as its authority Amilcar Zentella Sanches Marmol, comptroller general of Mexico under De La Huerta and now a member of the Chamber of Deputies. He is here gathering information on the De La Huerta movement.

Deputy Zentella said the specific charges will be "maladministration of funds. The Mexican government, he said, has sent agents throughout Mexico and the United States to investigate concessions and contracts made during the De La Huerta administration and to draw a bill showing just where the money went.

GOVERNOR GETS L PLAN PROTEST

Marshalled by Congressman John J. Douglass, a committee of East Boston political leaders and other residents, today protested to Governor Fuller, against the plan of the Boston Elevated to abandon the surface line in Lexington street.

The Elevated plans to substitute bus service and to tear up the surface line tracks. Douglass raised the question as to the right of the traction company to remove the rails. Governor Fuller referred this question to Asst. Atty. Gen. James H. Devlin who is to report back on the legal phase of the matter.

The delegation laid stress on the fact that if the proposed plan is adopted patrons will be unable to transfer to subway trains for Boston proper, inside the tunnel as at present.

The delegation included, besides Congressman Douglass, Representatives Timothy F. Donovan, also Councilor; William J. Hearn and Thomas J. Powers, together with former Representative J. Frederick Curtin, William H. Barker and Edward J. Wilkis. Congressman Douglass said between 500 and 600 East Boston residents were ready to go to the State-House, but the Governor had suggested a small delegation.

U. S. UNABLE TO ACT ON K. C. PROTEST

Paul Smith's, N. Y., Aug. 17 (A.P.)—While the petition of the Knights of Columbus asking that the United States intervene in Mexico to protect Catholics in their religious dispute with President Calles was not referred to directly, it was reiterated today at the Summer executive offices hat the Washington government has no authority to interfere in the purely domestic affairs of Mexico.

Whenever the rights of American citizens in person or property have been infringed, it was added, the American government will do what it can to see that these rights are duly respected.

Secretary of the State Kellogg, who is a guest at the Summer White House, has informed President Coolidge that he has knowledge of but one specific complaint concerning the taking of church property in Mexico. This was lodged with James R. Sheffield, the American Ambassador to that country, and the latter, upon making representations to the Mexico City government has been informed the case would be adjusted.

LOWELL WOMAN'S DEATH GIVES $75,000 TO POOR

Lowell, Aug. 17.—A fund of approximately $75,000 is available for the needs of the poor of the city of Lowell today, as a result of the death of Mrs. Ellen Jane Hanson of No. 8 Belmont street, widow of the late Charles H. Hanson.

Mr. Hanson, then a member of the License Commission, died on March 31, 1925, leaving the bulk of his estate to the poor of the city.

All bequests, however, under the terms of the will, were to be paid after the death of Mr. Hanson's widow.

After bequests to relatives are paid, it is estimated that about $75,000 will go to the poor.

BERT LYTELL IN LAST OF 'LONE WOLF' TALES

Orpheum Film Is Most Interesting of Vance's Series; Big Vaudeville Bill

"The Lone Wolf Returns," a thrilling melodrama from the fifth and last of the "Lone Wolf" tales of Louis Joseph Vance, is the film feature at Loew's Orpheum.

Heading the cast are Bert Lytell, who created the role of Michael Lanyard, the "Lone Wolf," in the previous versions of this noted character, and Billie Dove, as the heroine, Marcia Mayfair.

"The Lone Wolf Returns" is probably the best and most interesting of the five tales, at least it is so as shown at the Orpheum. The element of mystery, the spirit of adventure, the romantic and picturesque qualities of the story are grippingly projected.

On the stage is seen a spirited bill of vaudeville, the leading act being Ben Marks and company in a miniature musical comedy called "Apples." In it are featured Ethel Pick, Ed Heverly and Cliff Hall. The singing and dancing in this production is especially good. A lot of amusement is furnished by Little Jim, the wrestling bear.

Comedy of the sort that provokes the heartiest laughter is provided by Rucker and Ferrin, a character set giving a conception of an "Afro-Chinese Fracas." Other acts worthy of notice are Boardman and Worland, in a high class song recital; Mary Davis, a singing comedienne, and the Kitamura Bros. in "Oriental Frolics."

CHARMING

Mady Christians, as seen in "The Waltz Dream," at Loew's State, makes you realize why the poets call German the language of endearment.

'WALTZ DREAM' PRESENTED AT STATE

Strauss Opera on Screen Proves to Be Delightful Attraction

Those very estimable film folk, the Germans, have exported another gem of light, sophisticated comedy in a picturization of the Strauss operetta, "The Waltz Dream," now showing at Loew's State.

So perfect seems every detail of it's composition that, excepting some occasional carelessness in the matter of film-cutting—probably done on this side of the water—the weary reviewer forgets he is in a theatre in the fascination of pre-war Vienna, wine and waltzes and the charming ladies and gentlemen of the cast.

Though none of these names have any particular value in domestic box offices—being unknown to American audiences—each character enacted is the work of an artist, every foot of film has been photographed by a master craftsman and the infinite ability for taking pains, a mark of the German genius, is everywhere apparent.

In telling his story of the Viennese court—just a light romantic trifle—Director Berger eschews the conventional hero and heroine yarn so painfully overworked in the cinema. There is no "once-upon-a-time-there-was-a-beautiful-princess" spirit. On the contrary the "beautiful princess" gets beautifully "lit," when the occasion demands it, in somebody's "biergarten."

On the stage at the State, Irene Franklin, titled-topped star, appears in her inimitable repertoire of songs. She satirizes the vaudevillian vocalists, the drugstore cowboys, herself—and the audiences has a good time.

"DEAREST ENEMY" ENDS BOSTON RUN THIS MONTH

Chicago is calling for "Dearest Enemy," which is booked to open at the Illinois Theatre Labor Day week; and in order to get the Sunday opening—the biggest night of the week in the Windy City—it may become necessary to curtail the last week of the Summer engagement at the Tremont Theatre, ending the three months run that last of August. Helen Ford souvenir booklets will mark the 109th Boston performance.

Coming Events

George Beban, in person and on the screen, will top the week's bill in "Loves of Ricardo," at the Metropolitan, starting Saturday. Mr. Beban is supported by a company of spirited players in his stage appearance.

"So This Is Paris" will be presented as the screen feature at Loew's State next week.

George Jessel in "The Jazz Singer" will reopen the Hollis on Sept. 4.

Marion Davies Will Start 'Tillie' Soon

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 17.—Vacation days will soon be over for Marion Davies. Instead of frequenting the beach and taking a daily plunge, to say nothing of improving her game of tennis within the next few weeks, she will be submerged in the troubles of Tillie, Rush Westover's heroine, in "Tillie, the Toiler."

Marion Davies

While on the subject of "Tillie," Irving Thalberg said that Louis B. Mayer had chosen Hobart Henley to direct Miss Davies in her next comedy. As soon as Agnes Christine Johnstone, who was called East by the sickness of her mother, returns to Los Angeles, Mr. Henley will consult with her on Tillie's daily stenographic duties.

Miss Johnstone, assisted by Miss Davies, has added some comedy scenes that should enhance Tillie's value as a comedian.

As I said in this column before, everyone has a suggestion for Tillie and her office routine. She is not only the working girls' pet, but everyone else seems to enjoy her moods.

CECIL DE MILLE WILL MAKE A NEGRO PICTURE DRAMA. Contrary to the oft repeated rumors that he backed out when it came to following in David Belasco's footsteps in bringing to the screen the type of play that Mr. Belasco brought to the stage, plans have finally materialized.

Olga Printzlau, who was associated with William De Mille for a number of years as his scenario writer, prior to Clara Beranger's affiliation with him, has been engaged to write the scenario.

Miss Printzlau will not only write the negro drama, which is said to be based on the story of "Porgy," but she has contracted to write a series of additional scenes for Cecil De Mille.

Bertram Millenhauser, who is one of De Mille directorial supervisors, is already at work on the negro drama. He will, in all probability, direct it.

"THE ROYAL ROMANCE," I suspect, is the pictorial revelation of Gaby De Lys' romance with Manuel, King of Portugal. This conclusion does not require any great mental strain since the name, "The Royal Romance," has been changed to "Gaby."

Virginia Valli plays the famous French dancer and George O'Brien plays opposite her. Howard Hawks, who wrote the story, will direct it.

With all of the interesting public characters being represented on the screen, why not Gaby De Lys, whose romance with Harry Pilzer was also widely circulated at the time of her death.

FRED THOMSON AND HIS HORSE, SILVER KING, have been rumored as signing more contracts than anyone I know. First we hear that he is moving to Famous-Players, and then we hear Joseph Schenck has urged him to come to the United Artists.

He has agreed to give F. B. O. the same privilege of bidding as any of the other companies. In fact, he gave his word to J. Kennedy, the new head of F. B. O., that he would sign with him.

Kennedy is now in Europe, so Silver King and his popular master, I think it is safe to say, will make no move for six weeks at least.

RAMON NOVARRO IS GOING TO HAVE HIS OWN WAY. More or less, he has been arguing in favor of "Old Heidelberg," and for months he has been wishing for a program picture. Now he has a chance to really do something big.

"Old Heidelberg," the familiar story of the Prince who falls in love with the innkeeper's niece while at school, contains romance, atmosphere and plenty of action.

John Robertson will direct Novarro. That ought to be a happy arrangement all around.

Ramon Novarro

WHILE FRANCES MARION is modest and will not admit that she was chosen to write "Wind," Lillian Gish's next picture, because of her work in "The Scarlet Letter," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives are not so reticent. They admit they engaged her for this reason.

I MET Daniel Tomlinson on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot and he tells me that he has been engaged to write a series of stories for Harry Rapf. Tomlinson, who recently sold several original scenarios, has had considerable studio experience.

VERDI PROGRAM AT NORUMBEGA

Music-lovers are flocking in large numbers to see Norumbega Park Theatre, where Creatore and his band are giving a series of afternoon and evening concerts. A special Verdi program will be given tomorrow, and on Friday evening the bill will be devoted to the compositions of Wagner. While this may sound classical to the lovers of popular airs, it indicates no lessening of the wide popular appeal of all of Creatore's concerts. One of his rare gifts is that of interpreting classical melodies in a manner that makes them generally popular.

Pauline Talma, soprano soloist, appears at each program, afternoon and evening. Applause is redoubled during her appearance. Her voice combines rare power and range with deep, womanly tenderness.

Creatore's engagement comes to an end on Sunday, when he takes his band to the Central Canada Exhibition at Ottawa.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR VETERANS IN BIG PARADE

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 17 (A.P.).—A military air gripped this city today as Spanish-American War veterans prepared for a parade which will eclipse other events of the national encampment being held here.

From 15,000 to 20,000 old and young soldiers will march by the reviewing stand late this afternoon, the 10,000 or more veterans of 1898 being augmented by Iowa National Guardsmen, regular army troopers from Fort Des Moines and students at the Citizens' Military Training Camp here.

HERO HAS PICK OF MANY GIRLS

There were Cecily, Molly, Winifred; Eunice, Yvonne, Fifi; Lulu, Peg and Kittens; but there was only one Jock. One red-blooded, joy-seeking, good-looking, Jock Hamill, who went to college for an education.

And he learned about women from them.

Just when and where and what and why Jock did learn is set down so vividly by Katherine Brush in "The Woman Game" that you'll be intrigued by this startling novel from beginning to end.

The first instalment appears in next Monday's Boston Evening American.

It's a story of college life that rings true. You'll live the gay parties and frat dances with Jock and his pals. You'll thrill at the tender love-scenes, and quiver at the breathing-taking climax.

"The Woman Game" in next Monday's Boston Evening American.

Y. M. C. A. ARMY AND NAVY SEC'Y, L. H. DUNN, DEAD

Mount Kisco, N. Y., Aug. 17 (A.P.)—Lewis W. Dunn of Pleasantville, N. Y., a national secretary of the army and navy department of the Young Men's Christian Association, died at Mt. Misco Hospital from peritonitis.

A graduate of Colby College, Maine, Dunn, after entering Y. M. C. A. work, was New Hampshire State secretary among students and boys.

HUB MUSICIANS WILL MARRY

Two Boston musical luminaries hied themselves to Providence, the home of marital secrecies, with the belief that the Rhode Island capital would honor their wish to be married secretly. Today they realized themselves and resigned themselves to the fact that their friends had better be let in on the news.

Gladys Fossett, concert pianist and winner of the Endicott prize for musical composition, will be married to Emmanuel Carl Ondricek, violinist, some time. When? "Ah, gee," the prospective mutterred, disgusted with publicity. "Soon," they said, anyway.

Both have their musical studies at No. 115 Gainsboro street. Back there Miss Jossett has a thirteen-year-old sister, Ruth, who astounded musical critics in New York with her ability on the violin. Another sister, Marjorie Fossett, is also a violin virtuoso. Their home is in Sheridan avenue, Medford.

LODGERS FLEE $12,000 FIRE AT RUMFORD, ME.

Rumford, Me., Aug. 17 (A.P.).—Fire which for a time threatened a half a dozen buildings in the business section was extinguished today with damage estimated at $12,000.

The blaze was discovered in the fruit shop of Frank Jannacci and spread to an unoccupied building adjoining. Nine lodgers above the store made their escape. Both buildings were the property of Jonie L. Allen of Lowell.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Count Korzybski Putting Finishing Touches on Book at Rye Beach

DEEP IN SECLUSION AT RYE BEACH, Count Korzybski, author, at home in many languages, is deep in last minute touches of the final polishing off preceding the publication of a work which has claimed his pen for more than a year.

HE AND HIS AMERICAN spouse are in this country again, and each absorbed in work. Both Europe and America know them well, he as a soldier of Poland turned author, and she as Mina Edgerly, creator of a brand new method of artistic expression, portraiture on ivory.

NOW, AS THE Countess Mira Edgerly-Korzybski, she daily adds to her admirers during a North Shore stay. Two recent shows, at Grace Monks' Edgewood Bookshop and at Wenham Exchange, served to introduce the Countess to fashiondom thereabouts.

ALL ABOUT THE WORLD, in many a famous house, hang her exquisite portraits on ivory. And many famous persons have sat for her—English and Continental royalties, nobles, the great of various countries, American beauties and adorable children.

THE BOYISHLY ATTRACTIVE son of William K. Vanderbilt, 2d, and Mrs. Vanderbilt prolongs his Newport stay as house guest of the Norman De R. Whitehouses at "Sea Edge," in preference to Saratoga and its racing devotees, of which his mother, "Mrs. Willie K," is one.

A POPULAR YOUTH, Willis K., Jr., is proving, thus emulating family example. The elder Vanderbilts number their friends and admirers by the score, just as do the Vanderbilt girls, whom many knew and loved as Miss Consuelo and Miss Muriel Vanderbilt, now equally popular as Mrs. Earl E. T. Smith and Mrs. Frederick C. Church, Jr.

MRS. CHARLES E. COTTING
The former Constance Binney returns from Europe with her husband.

FOR THE FIRST TIME in two years Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Gray, now of New York and Locust Valley, are doing a Newport round. Boston well recalls, and has a vital interest in the "beautiful Deacon girls," as Miss Edith, Miss Gladys and Miss Dorothy Deacon came to be known. Miss Edith is now Mrs. Gray.

BOTH AT HOME and abroad did their exquisitely classic type of beauty cause a furore. The beautiful Vanderbilt in the possession of that famous old English title.

THIRD OF THE TRIO, Miss Dorothea married into Polish nobility, becoming the Princess Radzuzil at a magnificent wedding. The ups and downs of fortune attending those sisters make romantic reading.

THE MAURETANIA brings in today some Boston notables of widely varying interest. Lord Wodehouse, polo player, is down on the passenger list for debarkation, and comes to the North Shore to shine at Princemere.

RETURNING HONEYMOONERS are Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Cotting, whose marriage at Lyme, Ct., though styled by bride and bridegroom "just a simple country wedding," nevertheless created a wide interest.

AS THE CHARMING Miss Constance Binney, of stage and cinema fame, the petite and vivacious bride leaves behind a most successful professional career. She will make a most charming addition to Boston's smart and attractive young matron set.

BONE-DRY WALL PLANNED BY ANDREWS

Washington, Aug. 17 (I.N.S.).—A new prohibition enforcement program, based upon the erection of a bone-dry wall along every American border and including an intensive campaign against all liquor smugglers, will be placed in effect next Fall, it was said today by General Lincoln D. Andrews, the prohibition czar.

The new policy will be drafted upon the anti-smuggling agreement negotiated in London recently by Andrews and upon the actual experiences of the newly appointed district administrators throughout the nation in the last six months.

TO DRAFT PROGRAM

All the district dry heads will be summoned to Washington in September to help draft the new program.

Congress will be asked next December to help the program along by enacting the prohibition legislation, which failed of passage in the last session. This will include measures intended to suppress smuggling, strengthen the coast guard and give the Prohibition Bureau authority to use all other Federal border agents in the suppression of liquor smuggling.

STAMP OUT SMUGLING.

If given the aid of narcotic, immigration and customs agents, Treasury officials declared, they will be able to virtually stamp out the smuggling of contraband across the borders.

The dry czar presented his resignation to Secretary Mellon before he sailed for London. He was at once prevailed upon to withhold it, although he expressed a desire then to resign his post before the Summer ended. Now he may remain indefinitely.

FIRST WIRELESS IS SAVED BY OPERATOR

Wood's Hole, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—The first wireless message from ship to shore a quarter of a century ago was saved from failure by the intervention of a relay operator who substituted for Marconi, inventor of wireless, it has just been revealed.

Henry G. Haddon, manager of the wireless office here, who was an operator on the night of Aug. 16, 1901, when Marconi sent his messages from the steamer Lucani to President McKinley in Washington, tells the story as recorded in the office diary.

TO THE WHITE HOUSE

Marconi was sending through the South Shoal Lightship disconnect station, and Wood's Hole, to the White House in Washington.

"This first message expressed Marconi's hopes for the future of wireless transmission," Mr. Haddon recalled. "Before the message was completed, the first crude wireless sending outfit broke down.

"When the break came Jack Mitchell, operator at Siasconset messaged me, 'Cut off Washington for a minute and we'll finish the message.' It looked as though the first radiogram had about forty words still to go.

THE CONCLUSION.

"In a few minutes he sent me the conclusion, signed 'Guglielmo Marconi.' Washington took it, and within an hour we were relaying the President's reply to Marconi.

"Meanwhile the apparatus had been repaired, and the rest of Marconi's message was coming through. 'Compare me close and his,'" Jack Mitchell messaged me. I looked at the two, and except for differences in a few words, the two conclusions were identical. The bona-fide ending stopped with me, and no one ever knew the differences. Jack Mitchell is dead."

WIFE ELOPED WITH FAMILY

New Haven, Ct., Aug. 17.—Not only did Mrs. Anna Rosenthal of Worcester take her two-months-old baby with her when she eloped with Harry Shannon of Worcester, according to the complaint of her blind husband, Abraham Rosenthal, but she took along her mother and her mother's suitor.

All this, according to the court charges of the police who raided a local hotel on complaint of the husband.

The Shannons and Rosenthals are neighbors in Worcester. The husband suspected that young Shannon and Mrs. Rosenthal had come to this city and so complained to the police.

The blind husband's complaint led to a raid, and the results of the sworn down upon the Central Hotel here astounded the raiders considerably more than the raided ones.

True to the husband's prediction, the police found Mrs. Rosenthal and young Shannon together in a room. But in the same room crooned the two months' old Rosenthal baby.

Then, when Mrs. Rosenthal protested that there was nothing improper about the arrangement as her mother was in an adjoining room, the police investigated and found the woman a mother, Mrs. Beasis danger of the Bronx, New York. But with her was young Arthur Bergman of West 164th street, New York.

The affair was so complicated that the puzzled police brought the ensemble into court today, charged with general misconduct.

Set Dates for Police Tests

The Civil Service Commission today announced new dates for examinations for the police forces throughout the state. For cities and towns outside the Metropolitan District he examination will be held September 21, for Boston and the Metropolitan District, September 16.

Quaker Oats "stands by" you through the morning

That's why millions start their days in this way

TO feel right through the morning, you must have well-balanced, complete food at breakfast. At most other meals—that is, at luncheon and at dinner—you usually get that kind of food.

But at breakfast the great dietary mistake is most often made—a hurried meal, often badly chosen.

Then Quaker Oats, containing 16% protein, food's great tissue builder, 68% carbohydrate, its great energy element, plus all-important vitamines and the "bulk" that makes laxatives seldom needed, is the dietetic urge of the world today.

It is food that "stands by" you through the morning. Food that should start every breakfast in your home.

Don't deny yourself the natural stimulation this rich food offers.

Get Quaker Oats today. Grocers have two kinds: Quick Quaker, which cooks in 3 to 5 minutes, and Quaker Oats.

McCORMICK PROTEGE CONFESSED BEING IMPOSTER, WOMAN SAYS

TOLD MANY DIFFERENT STORIES

IRREGULAR HOURS

"She hid it, but no sooner had she done so than she was seized by the guards and carried back to a torture chamber. But she never told where her child was and before they could inflict the final punishment she regained possession of her baby and escaped. The child died as she was preparing to leave Europe for the United States.

"Carmen had the most irregular hours. She could not have worked to support herself. She rose when she left like a bat and returned home at all hours of the night. Yet, she did nothing that could be called wrong. I tried to be a mother to her. I tried to reason with her, to bring her down to a normal way of living, although she paid little if any heed to me.

"A prosperous looking man, whose first name was Max, came to see her often. He was short and thick set. He had an automobile and usually carried her away in his car. She never spoke of him to me, and when I questioned her about him, she evaded my questions.

"Carmen told me so many conflicting stories that finally I asked her why she did not tell me the truth about herself. Then it was that she burst into tears and confessed all her stories of Turkey and the harem were falsehoods.

"'I have tried to fool you, the same as I fool everybody else,' she pleaded.

"'The truth is I came from the West Side. I was reared in the street. My mother died when I was only 5. My father I lost long ago. Others took care of me.

INVENTED ROLE

"I have been associated with people of whom I do not want to tell you. I have never done anything bad. I have always been a good girl. But I saw I could not get ahead if I just used my old name and old associations. I had to get rid of all that.

"So I invented a new role for myself and just lifted myself into it. I became a Sultan's daughter and so I have attracted people to me in a strangely irresistible way.

"Things went on much the same for a while and then something happened that really alarmed me. One evening a young man came to see her and I met him in the living room. He was light complexioned and blue-eyed. She left us for a moment to go to her room. She returned with a bottle and three glasses, which she filled and passed around.

"I somehow decided not to drink it. I noticed that they did not drink theirs. At last I got up and placing my glass on the mantle, left the room. They departed soon afterward. Later I found their glasses still full.

"About midnight that night Carman called me on the telephone. 'I'm in fearful trouble,' she moaned. 'I'll come home as soon as I can. But don't worry about me. I'll get out of it all somehow.'

IN SHOOTING SCRAPE

"More than a week later she returned to my house. It must have been in December, 1919. One of her arms was bandaged. She saw me looking at it and said:

"'I was in a shooting scrape. A revolver went off and the bullet struck this arm. I've been under arrest, too. I can't come home for quite a while. I am under probation. I must live for a while at the home of a certain woman and take care of her children.'

"I can go out now and then, but I must report back every night to this woman and sleep at her house. When I'm free from my probation, I'll come back to you.'

"She gave me the name of this woman, but I have forgotten it. She did not come back. The next I heard from her was early in 1920, when she called me on the telephone and said she was in St. Luke's Hospital. She said she wanted me to visit her.

"I found she had a beautiful room filled with flowers. She was receiving the best service the institution afforded. She told me a rich man was paying her expenses. She explained her absence by saying:

WEALTHY MAN HELPED

"'After I got out of probation a wealthy man came to my aid. He got me a room at the Auditorium Hotel and provided a cash drawing account there, so I could have all the money I wanted.

"'But I didn't like so much splendor. I felt lost there. So my wealthy friend told me to go to the W. W. A. Hotel. I went there and fell sick there. I went into a delirium, they told me, and kept repeating the name of the rich man who had been so kind to me. They sent for him and he had me taken to this hospital. He is paying all my expenses here.'

"About this time 'Max' came to my house and asked for Carmen. He seemed to know her, too.

When I told him about her beautiful room at the hospital, he shrugged his shoulders and said:

"Well, what do you think of that? That's what her imagination has done for her. Why, I knew the girl when she was a little thing, driving a car on the West Side. She was so poor then she didn't know many times where the next meal was coming from.'

READY TO TESTIFY

The woman who befriended Carmen, and has revealed the inner history of the girl in the foregoing interview, asked that her name be withheld. She explained, however, that if the courts required her testimony, she would take the stand to swear to all she has said here.

At St. Luke's Hospital, Miss Pringle, superintendent of nurses, said Carmen Sylvano was there from February 20, 1920, to July 15, 1920.

"Carmen showed me a scar on her arm one day," said Miss Pringle. "She explained it by saying:

"'I got lost in a Turkish harem. I had a boy baby. They took it away. I found it and hid it. They tortured me to make me tell where it was. They cut open my arm, saying they would bleed me to death if I did not tell, but I didn't.'"

C. C. STILLMAN'S BODY TO ARRIVE FRIDAY

New York, Aug. 17 (I.N.S.).—The body of Charles Chauncey Stillman, financier, who died Monday of acute appendicitis on board the Aquitania, will arrive here Friday. Stillman, an outstanding benefactor of Harvard University, was a brother of James A. Stillman, Mrs. Percy Rockefeller and Mrs. G. W. Rockefeller. Stillman seemed to be in good health when he left Cherbourg last Saturday for New York. Late Sunday night, however, he was stricken with appendicitis. Still man pursued a business career after his graduation from Harvard in 1888. He made many munificent bequests to Harvard.

'BABY IS DROWNED AS AUNT GIVES IT BATH

Philadelphia, Aug. 17.—A thirteen-year-old girl's forgetfulness was responsible for the death of Dorothy McCann, ten-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McCann, of No. 1314 North 62nd street, drowned in a tub.

Helen Buckley, the child aunt, in charge of the baby for a few hours, undertook to give it a bath in a set tub and then stepped into another room. She forgot the baby and when she returned it was dead. The police are holding her on a charge of homicide although her sister absolves her from all blame.

HAREM BEAUTY TELLS OF MEETING M'CORMICK

(Here is the second installment of Carmen Sylvano's amazing story as she told it to her husband, Sidney Berman, and others—a fantastic tale which outrivals fiction.

Carmen Sylvano Need in America in luxury, receiving huge gifts of money from Harold McCormick, the Chicago millionaire, who believed her when she said she was the daughter of the Turkish Sultan and wife of Enver Pasha, once War Minister of the Ottoman Empire.

Carmen Sylvano states that she was born in the imperial Harem, daughter of Dolorosa Braganza, Spanish beauty who had been kidnaped. At fifteen she said she was given in marriage to Enver Pasha, and with her hero husband lived a nightmare existence of horror.

She planned an escape to America and secured her child in a Scutari convent. When she refused to tell her husband where the child was hidden he tortured her by driving a pin in her arm and allowing the blood to flow until she fainted.

(Copyright, 1926, by Universal Service and the Boston Evening American. Reproduction, in whole or part prohibited).

New York, Aug. 17.—Two weeks later I had strength enough to make my escape.

I placed all my mother's papers (the bonds and titles which came to me at her death) in a box and with the aid of her influential friends in Spain, completed the plans for my flight to America.

My baby was still safe with the sisters in Scutari. Passage was arranged for me aboard the leaving Constantinople for New York.

DRESSED AS OFFICER

One day, my hair clipped close to my head and dressed in the uniform of a Turkish officer, I very calmly walked from my home and stepped into a waiting automobile. In an hour I was aboard and at dusk the steamer sailed for New York.

I kept to my cabin during the voyage and when we reached New York I was met by my mother's Spanish friends, came on board.

We talked for a while in French. Madrid. I was told, had acted swiftly on learning of my mother's death. Although Spain was a neutral nation in the war, influential friends had long been struggling to assist my daughter in the Sultan's harem, and were now prepared to transfer their aid to me.

Enver Pasha's agents were on my trail. Secrecy was necessary and I was still happy miles from my real goal—to obtain my baby again and to find Mr. McCormick, of the United States.

Then my friend explained that, as I was without passport and, hence, could not land in America, a final ordeal was necessary. Her instructions terrified me more than did the actual experience.

First, we placed pillows and cushions in a large trunk, and made one corner of the stateroom. stepped in the trunk and crouched down. My unknown friend smiled at me encouragingly and then closed the lid. I heard the locks snap. A few minutes later I was being gently moved.

JOUNCED AROUND

For an hour I was jounced and tumbled around. I knew we were going through crowded streets and later ascending in an elevator.

Finally there was quiet. The trunk was opened and I gazed up in the face of my friend.

She spoke quickly:

"Princess, you must now follow your mother's instructions. That is best.

"Here are American clothes and in this envelope is plenty of money for your needs until you find Mr. McCormick. But remember, don't stay long in one place—the arm of Enver Pasha is long and his hand, as you know, is a heavy one. Don't stay in one hotel for longer than a week at a time."

She left me and I began my search for Mr. McCormick of the United States.

Each week I changed my hotel, moving up and down the Purties in New York, bewildered, frightened and almost panic-stricken.

And then, when I had been here a month, I received the worst blow of all. I was worried about my baby, the little son back there in the Scutari convent. Finally I cabled and fainted when I received the reply the next day.

My little child had died of pneumonia the week after I sailed from Constantinople.

ILL HERSELF

That news made every effort of mine futile. I lost hope, became sick in body and mind. The New York prince was too harsh for a girl reared in the Orient. Within a few weeks I was ill in a dreary hotel room, threatened with pneumonia.

Then I picked up a paper. I had been trying to improve my English by daily reading, and as I read this morning my eye caught the name of Harold McCormick. I think it was an announcement of his return from Europe, but it gave me the news I wanted—that he lived in Chicago.

The next day, still ill, I took a train for that city. Here again, my ignorance of English handicapped me.

Then my funds began to get low. I moved to the Y. W. C. A., became ill and delirious and was removed to St. Luke's Hospital.

It was there, through the efforts of Mrs. G. I. Reed, a social worker whom I met in the Y. W. C. A., that my quest for Mr. McCormick came to an end.

I had kept the papers and letters which my mother had given me. Mrs. Reed, examining the papers, came across the name of McCormick, and brought him to the hospital.

I was living in a half-world of feverish dreams then, and it was as a figure in a dream that I saw the great American enter the ward by the side of Mrs. Reed. I thought that my death was not far distant, and I had a little wave of happiness to realize that I had outstripped an unkind fate and completed my mother's mission.

GETS LETTERS

Lying there in my cot, I asked Mrs. Reed to bring me the casket of letters and papers which I had carried from Constantinople. Weakly, I handed them to Mr. McCormick.

Sitting there by my cot, he read them carefully, and then for a long time gazed at the photograph of my mother. It was a tiny picture, taken years ago in Spain, before I was born.

I gave him a brief history of my mother's tragic death and told him of my long search for him. I was still very ill, and I remember him patting my arm and very gently telling me not to talk any more that day. He told me that he would visit me the next morning, and that his own private physician, Dr. Preble, would come to attend me that afternoon.

Steadily I gained strength, and within a few weeks I was taken from the hospital to Mr. McCormick's beautiful home at No. 1000 Lake Shore Drive.

It was at this time, sometime in the mid-Summer of 1920, that Mr. McCormick suggested Mrs. Reed, my friend at the Y. W. C. A., to act as my companion.

About this time we had our first talk about my estate.

I remember that he told me I was worth somewhere between $5,000,000 and $8,000,000 in American money.

Then he explained that, as I was only eighteen, it was necessary under the American laws for me to have a guardian to look after my affairs, and he said that he was going to be appointed to that position.

I was delighted. I liked the idea of him being my guardian, and from that day began to call him Uncle Harold.

GIN, girls and jazz, the 1926 edition of "Wine, women and song" spell the downfall of many a college man. Here's Jock Hamill, who goes in for all three, "heavy." What happens to him makes a fascinating tale. "The Woman Game"—the game that Jock plays—begins in the Boston Evening American next Monday.

STOP ABUSES IN SANATORIUM

Gambling and drinking have already been stopped among patients at the Boston Sanatorium in Mattapan, according to members of the City Council who have investigated unofficially the reports of lax discipline at the institution.

Desiring to refrain from formal statement on conditions until after the hearing Monday, when trustees of the hospital will issue their own defense, the councilmen in question made it clear that they want no radical change in the management of the tuberculosis sanatorium.

Patients were permitted to break the rules because of the serious nature of their cases, in the majority of instances incurable, it was said.

As a result of the disclosures made by the Boston Tuberculosis Association these infractions of the regulations will no longer be tolerated, in the opinion of these councillors.

They also professed to see a change for the better in the treatment accorded patients in the shape of closer supervision on the part of the physicians in charge and closer adherence to prescribed routine on the part of internes charges with regulating the daily life of the patients.

Difference of opinion exists as to the proper authority to control the Boston Sanatorium. If any councilmen favor the change recommended by the Tuberculosis Association they are keeping in the background, according to officials at City Hall, who declared the consensus of opinion seemed to favor independent control as at present, with perhaps some degree of supervision by the Mayor or Board of Health.

The ordinance committee of the City Council, to which a bill calling for a switch to City Hospital control was referred by the full Council, will meet Monday for a hearing on the matter. Mayor Nichols will also confer again on that day with the Sanatorium trustees who, in the meantime, are studying the criticism of the Tuberculosis Association.

Mussolini Escapes Admirers on Sail Boat

Riccione, Italy, Aug. 17 (A.P.)—Premier Mussolini has solved the problem of how to escape the attentions of his admirers by spending most of his vacation with his family aboard a sailboat.

Bareheaded and dressed in the whits of a yachtsman, the Premier has been the most carefree member of his party which includes his wife, his daughter Edda, and his son and several friends.

The Premier entered Riccione by automobile under the strictest incognito allowing a huge crowd to cheer vociferously at his empty special train.

'MME X' ENTERS McDADE CASE

A mysterious "Madame X" will play a prominent but absentee role in the hearing this week on the removal of James H. McDade as deputy master at Deer Island, according to Assistant Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman, who declares the woman has admitted a visit with McDade on the island.

Her identity will be shrouded in secrecy because of her standing in the community in which she lives, said Silverman, but other witnesses will be called upon to testify of an alleged meeting between the deputy master and "Madame X" in a subordinate's apartment at the prison.

"We expect to have among our witnesses the wives of prisoners to whom we charge McDade made advances when they were visiting their husbands at Deer Island," declared Silverman, who will represent the city at a hearing to be held on Friday.

"McDade's actions tended to incite riot. On one occasion McDade tried to stop a motion picture show and was 'rasped' by the prisoners. At another time he caused trouble in the kitchen and was rushed by a group of prisoners. An officer came to his aid and suffered a broken leg while the deputy master ran."

McDade, who demanded the public hearing, has promised to make even more sensational charges than are made against him. Drunkenness is one of the allegations against him.

SPECIAL CLUE FOR NO. 5—The same story was once made with Bryant Washburn as the star.

By the CONTEST EDITOR

The Boston Evening American offers today, for the delight of participants in the Greater Movie Season Contest, the second problem of a most interesting competition.

Every bit as easy, contestants are sure to say, as Problem No. 1.

To even the most casual of movie-goers, naming the star whose face is missing from these first two pictures, and naming the motion-picture plays from which the photographs are taken, must be as easy as not patronizing the gum machines in the Boston street cars.

Nor will tomorrow's test be much more difficult, if any; and the same may be said with truth about the day after, and the day after that.

Is it time, then, to be packing one's steamer trunk for the Mediterranean tour for two persons, all expenses paid?

May one begin now to figure the likelihood of New England's taking the First NATIONAL prize, as well, the tour for two persons around the world?

Let us not be precipitate! There must be something to this contest, somewhere, somehow. Stands to reason everybody is not going to take the first award. Watch! Wait! Work!

It is going to be a short contest. It is not going to drag through two months. The final problem, Contest Picture No. 30, will be printed three short weeks from tomorrow. Soon afterwards, the name of someone who is reading these lines today, some New Englander, perhaps someone you know—your own name, possibly—will be printed here as that of the winner of the 70-day tour on the Royal Mail steamship Orca!

The Taxi Dancer

by Robert Terry Shannon

A Thrilling Story of Night Life and Night Clubs; a Mad Whirl of Adventure

Joslyn Poe, daughter of a proud, but impoverished Virginia family, wants a career, not marriage. Her mother wants her to wed. The wild blood of a line of daring women runs in her veins. She wants adventure. A seeress tells her of the "wildness" in her blood. She goes to a dance. She determines she will settle her problem that night—to marry George Ransom, well-to-do, but no dandy, or—go to New York in seek of adventure. She meets a stranger at the dance.

Milton Stein, the stranger, advises Joslyn to go to the city and to dance. Joslyn, hungry and discouraged, is heard weeping by Kittie Lane, a manicurist. Kittie gets Lee Rogers, a friend, to invite them to dinner.

While the girls are at the table with Rogers, James Kelvin, movie star, attempts to cultivate Joslyn's acquaintance There is a near row with Rogers. Kelvin goes away leaving with Joslyn a sense of some strange influence over her. A few days afterward Kittie is brought home blind from bad booze. Joslyn rushes to Stein's Academy to take a job as a "Taxi Dancer" to care for Kittie. In the academy she meets Stephen Bates, a man-about-town, who offers to go to Kittie's help.

Kittie's life and sight are saved by the doctors secured by Bates. They both go to a party at Bates'. Kelvin is there. He kills Bates in a quarrel.

Kittie saves Joslyn by telling the police that the death row was over her.

With Kelvin hiding in her apartment Joslyn is called by the district attorney. She bests him. Police watch her flat. Great luck comes to Joslyn. She is offered $250 per week as a dancer. Brierhalter asks her not to accept and offers her $500.

CHAPTER XXVI.

"I'M a gambler—I like to win," Brierhalter said. "All men who make any kind of a success are like that. If I'd been content with the ordinary winning I'd probably now be, well, perhaps, a head bookkeeper with some brokerage house. When I went after a deal on the Street I never figured on a piker's profit. I wanted cleanups and I got them, lots of them. And that's what I distinctly want from you. You stir something deep in me. No, if I got you by marriage it would be just a case of piker's profit. With you, dear girl, I want the thrill, the kick, of a great cleanup that'll be the biggest thing that ever happened in my life."

Joslyn looked quickly at the man's face; it was the incarnation of selfishness, of egotistical greed for triumph. There was, she saw curiously, no desire of the senses, no physical conflagration.

The remarkable thing was that she did not at once detest him. That fact, she reasoned, must have been due to the force of his personality, his aura of achievement. But there was another thought that in a great measure took away the resentment that Joslyn might have felt.

Brierhalter's mind, she had sensed, was like a jeweled watch, a meticulously balanced scale. It was possible that his powers were out of alignment, that the delicate adjustment was no longer accurate. But this, she realized, was a splitting hairs.

"Why—why do you cling to such a wild idea?" she asked him, with a frankness that matched his own. "Your good sense ought to save you from such folly."

Brierhalter tried patiently to explain. "I'm on earth to get the most out of life," he told her. "With me, it must always be a struggle for the unattainable. My interest in making money had petered out. To make a million dollars for me at the beginning was as difficult as Peary's reaching the North Pole."

The taxicab was temporarily stalled in traffic and the conversation, the oddity in Joslyn's life went on with its strange, artificial casualness.

"I might understand you if I, personally, meant everything in the world to you," Joslyn said. "But I don't. I'm just a goal man too. You look perfectly normal and respectable but inside you're a plunderer at heart. You want to steal something. In this case the honest payment would be marriage but you want to avoid payment, isn't that it?"

"You're wrong about my not caring for you," Brierhalter said. "I think I told you once that when I first met you something inside me clicked—something that had never clicked before. You're the one woman on earth for me, Joslyn."

"And you propose shame, instead of marriage!" she said as she strug-

"FOOLS" HIT BY ENVOY HERRICK

New York, Aug. 17.—Myron T. Herrick, U. S. Ambassador to France, reached New York today.

Mr. Herrick said fundamental conditions in France were sound.

Reports of French ill-feeling against American tourists have been "greatly exaggerated," he asserted.

"Every country has its fools, and who are fools at home as well as abroad," he said, "and as for reports of unsafe travel and great inhospitality in France this is bally nonsense. There have been some cases of irritation, but they have been magnified and the government deplores it."

Mr. Herrick appeared concerned when informed that some members of the American Legion had planned to protest the Legion's visit to Paris next year, and characterized it as a "grave mistake."

Attributing the fall of the franc to a loss of confidence, Mr. Herrick said he was convinced that with the return of confidence the franc would reach normal conditions ultimately.

NIGHT OF TERROR IN WOODS

Two Mothers, Boys, Girl Found in Douglas as 100 Hunt Them

Douglas, Aug. 17—Four miles from the nearest village, lost in the wilds of Douglas woods since early yesterday afternoon, rain drenched and hungry, two mothers, two boys, and a girl, were rescued at 3:30 today by an old wood chopper.

Lost since nightfall, Mrs. Louis Chabot, 35, her sons Joseph, ten, Louis, 12, Mrs. Helen Chabot, 45, of Fall River, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Louis Chabot, and Lillian Chabot, ten, daughter of the Fall River woman, were where they had been asleep under a tree on the farm he Connecticut line by George Chandler, sixty-five, well known woodsman of Douglas.

HELD LANTERN ALOFT.

A posse of 100 had scoured the woods in search of the five since early afternoon. Chandler had taken a long course. He took the trail that he had beaten for many years, held a hand latern in the air to signal the lost ones, and called out in the wilderness until he was finally heard.

The Chabot women and their children started away from the home of Mrs. Louis Chabot, Whitinsville, at seven yesterday morning. They planned a blue-berrying expedition in the woods of Douglas.

LOST THEIR WAY.

At 11 A. M., they were already a few hours in the woods. They realized that they had strayed from beaten paths, tried to find their way back and only wandered further into the denseness of the woods.

Nightfall drew on, the children became frightened, and heavy rain was falling.

Back on the Walling Pond road, at least three miles away, the party had left their automobile. In it were their lunches. They were hungry, chilled, and soaked.

Louis Chabot, husband and father of three who were in the woods, became alarmed when his wife did not appear at nightfall. He enlisted the aid of the police, Walter E. Schuster, local manufacturer and former member of the Legislature, and an army of neighbors.

WANTS TO BE CITIZEN OF NATIVE LAND AGAIN

Percy Johnson, formerly of Arkansas, who became a citizen of Liberia in 1924, arrived here today on the steamship West Irmo from West Africa seeking admission to his native land as an immigrant under the quota for the Liberian Republic. He declared his intention of leaving the city for Detroit, where he will join his wife.

The passage of the West Irmo was uneventful with the exception of the loss by death of two chimpanzees, valued at $1,000 apiece.

Two policemen saved the life of Lucy E. Nicholas, 52, and single, of No. 8150 Washington street, Jamaica Plain, after she had been overcome by gas.

RECEIPTS BY STATE GROWING

New Estimate by Officials Shows Great Increase in Revenue

A total of $13,000,000 will be collected this year in fees by the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles, according to a new estimate by officials.

Receipts from fees reached $11,473,104 by the end of last month, it was announced today. Last year at that time the total was only $8,213,697. These figures include fees from all sources, including registrations and drivers' licenses.

There were 37,032 automobiles registered in July, bringing the total for the eight months of the fiscal year to 738,006. Of these registrations, 638,629 are passenger cars and 99,376 commercial cars. The total is more than 62,000 greater than last year.

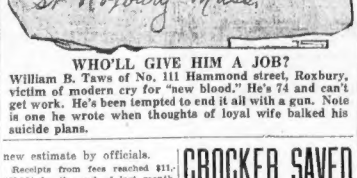
There are $12,100 licensed drivers in Massachusetts, as compared with 467,572 a year ago. More than 24,000 persons were given examinations in July and 17,332 were given licenses.

10 BIDS OPENED FOR SHAWMUT BRANCH LINE

Ten contracting firms today offered bids for the construction of the new Shawmut branch line in the Dorchester rapid transit system, bids being opened at the office of the Boston Transit Commission.

The lowest bidder was A. G. Tomasello & Son, Inc., $255,910. The highest bidder was V. Grande, with $272,410. The Tomasello firm contracted to complete the work in 270 days.

Only in the Way?



WHO'LL GIVE HIM A JOB?

William B. Taws of No. 111 Hammond street, Roxbury, victim of modern cry for "new blood." He's 74 and can't get work. He's been tempted to end it all with a gun. Note is one he wrote when thoughts of loyal wife balked his suicide plans.

GRAVE MAY CALL MAN 'TOO OLD'

Roxbury Steam Engineer Bares Tragic Story of Age; Who'll Give Him a Chance?

"You're Old and You're Only in the Way."

William B. Taws, seventy-four years old, never heard that song. It is almost a ribald rhyme, strong in maudlin sentiment and somewhat cheap pathos.

And then comes William B. Taws with the story that gives the words a new meaning, that shows that the uttermost in tragedy is written in the song, that shows that the composer was struggling to express a complete despair.

These alternatives face William B. Taws of No. 111 Hammond street, Roxbury, a first-class steam engineer:

A Job or the River.
Work or the Gun.
Rent money, food money, or suicide.

This is no panhandler with a hard-luck story, this William B. Taws, first-class steam engineer. Born in Boston in 1852, this man shirred shoes and sold papers on the streets of Boston while the world was athrill with the epic being written at Bull Run, Gettysburg, Chickamauga.

He became a steam engineer and after he had attained his first-class papers he married the girl, who now waits patiently at No. 111 Hammond street, Roxbury, in the hope that her husband will come home with the rent.

NEW BLOOD HAS CALL.

New blood, new blood, the fatal death-knell of modernity has seized him back and back, and finally—Out.

No bad habits have had place in the run of misfortune that has been William B. Taws' lot.

When first new blood started pushing him toward the wall he and his wife feared what was left of the future but little. They had a strong, stalwart son, who had many a time promised his aging mother and father that soon he would be in a position to let them sit at home and take of other days while he went out to battle life in their behalf.

But then came the World War and the mother and father gave their country all—a boy who was but a unit in Uncle Sam's great army, but who was their comfort and their whole hope for the future. The boy died in Galveston, Tex., and the aged father made a sad pilgrimage to bring back the body.

FACES GLOOMY FUTURE.

But the father did not lose courage. He went out again in search of a job. He found it easily enough. The hysteria of war was abroad in the land. The father of a hero who had died was received with open arms. The future looked bright enough for the two left desolate with the memory of their sailor son.

But that dread cry, "New blood, new blood," slowly but surely downed the wave of war hysteria. The references which the aged man from Hammond street so proudly drew make it all too clear what the trouble was.

"You're Old And You're in the Way!"

William B. Taws is a first class steam engineer. But he is looking for work, not seeking a position at his trade. He will take anything.

CROCKER SAVED BY LOST LEG

Paris, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—Donald G. Crocker of Quincy, Mass., who was arrested here after he had drank a toast to the unknown soldier and broke the glass on the tomb today was set at liberty by the Parisian police without a fine. They were influenced to do this because the man had been an American service man and had lost a leg in the war.

The commissary of police, however, gave him a serious lecture on the evil of imbibing too freely and told him that while the delightful pastime of drinking champagne is all right in its place the tomb of the unknown soldier is not a proper place for such a pastime, Crocker promised never to do it again.

RESIGN? "NO" DECLARES SECRETARY KELLOGG

Paul Smith's, N. Y., Aug. 17. (A.P.).—Secretary of State Kellogg today flatly denied a report that he contemplated resigning. The report, emanating from Washington, said the purpose of the secretary's visit to President Coolidge at White Pine Camp was to clear up pending departmental business prior to his retirement.

2 CRUSHED TO DEATH BY ROCK

Milford, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—Ambrigio Paccioretti, aged sixty-two years and Pietro Luchini, aged fifty-nine, quarrymen, are dead as the result of being pinned beneath a big block of granite which, it is stated, slipped from the derrick at the Dodds brothers quarry, today.

Paccioretti died instantly and Lucini died on the way to a hospital.

Each left a wife and several children.

BOSTON JOINS CANADIAN-AMERICAN HOCKEY LEAGUE

FOUR CLUBS NOW CENTRE OF CIRCUIT

Springfield and Providence Also Land Franchises in New Organization

By STED CHANDLER.

At a meeting held in the Boston Athletic Association today a new hockey league was organized, to be known as the Canadian-American Hockey League. It will, in all probability, be composed of seven teams, four of which are already definitely in, and assurances received that a fifth will join.

Boston, Springfield, Providence and Quebec form the nucleus of the new ice circuit, while Montreal, Ottawa and Newark are the doubtful clubs. Montreal, however, gave assurance of her entry into the league.

This circuit, contrary to the belief which has become somewhat general, will be in no way a farm for the National Hockey League. Neither will it be a "minor" or "junior" league.

It is a separate professional circuit, whose prospects even at this early date are bright. There will be no controversy with the National League, and the new organization is now working on an agreement with the Nationals.

FUTURE PLANS DISCUSSED.

At today's meeting a constitution was drawn up and adopted and plans discussed for the future. Although no president has as yet been elected, Charles C. Clapp of Boston was the secretary-treasurer and chairman of the meeting.

Those present were Colonel John B. Hammond of New York, Judge J. Dooley of Providence, Hubert Milot of Providence, Albert G. Gelger of Boston, George Sears of Springfield, George V. Brown of Boston, Charles C. Clapp of Boston, chairman, Charles A. Adams of Boston, Henri Fontaine of Quebec and Emile Dion of Quebec.

The date of the annual meeting of the Canadian-American League will be determined a soon as that of the National Hockey League is determined. The meeting of that organization comes now in the latter part of September but it is scheduled to be changed, probably to early September, and the new circuit is holding its plans in abeyance until that is made definite.

MONTREAL WANTED.

Fontaine, representing Quebec, was duly authorized to take up the matter of the new league with the other Canadian clubs, and this will be done immediately.

The officials are particularly anxious to have favorable action from Montreal, as that city, with the possible exception of Quebec, is the only one in the loop in which Sunday hockey may be played. In Montreal it will be absolutely necessary to have Sunday games in order to avoid conflict with the other teams.

The members of the Canadian-American League will meet soon again, at which time, further announcements will be made.

Boston Pros Get Beattie

Coach Herb Treat of the Boston team in the American Professional Football League announced that he has received word from Bob Beattie, All-American tackle at Princeton in 1924, that he will sign a Boston contract as soon as he arrives here from the Adirondacks, probably in two weeks time.

Beattie, one of Princeton's greatest tackles, served under Treat, when the latter was Tiger line coach in '24, and is now a councilor in an Adirondack camp.

Con O'Brien, tackle at Boston College in 1926, has agreed to play with the local outfit, when he is off duty from the Boston police force.

BOAT SHATTERS TRAVEL MARKS

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 17 (A.P.).—All records for water travel between Philadelphia and Atlantic City were broken today when Rear Commodore J. Howard Wilson Steiver's Clarella, flying the burgee of the Tri-State Yacht Club, put in here for fuel six hours 20 minutes after leaving the starting line of the club dock at Essington, Pa., at 5:30 this morning.

One minute behind the Clarella was the Baby Booner piloted by Mrs Mabel Walbur, the only woman skipper to enter the 380-mile ocean race between Philadelphia and New York and declared to be the only sportswoman who ever drove an ocean-going yacht.

The Baby Booner left Philadelphia 13 minutes ahead of the Clarella and was only overhauled at the bellbuoy outside the inlet after an exciting chase down the Delaware.

Previous record for boats of any class between Philadelphia and Atlantic City was eight hours 18 minutes.

SECRECY SHROUDS HEYDLER HEARING OF PIRATES

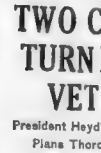
TWO CLUBS TURN DOWN VET STAR

President Heydler of National Plans Thorough Probe of "Rebellion"

BULLETIN.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—Behind closed doors President Heydler of the National League today began an inquiry into differences between the management of the Pittsburgh Nationals and three deposed players, Max Carey, Charles Adams and Carson Bigbee, who were dismissed last week for agitating the removal of Vice-President Fred Clarke from the playing bench.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 17 (I.N.S.)—The possibility that Max Carey, deposed captain, may remain with the Pittsburgh Pirates, was expressed on all sides here today, prior to the meeting of John A. Heydler, president of the National League, with Pirate officials and the three players discharged recently for alleged insubordination.



Fred Clarke.

Taking cognizance of Carey's fourteen years in organized baseball, during which no charge of any kind had been preferred against him before the attempts of the three players to keep Fred Clarke, assistant manager, off the Pirates bench, Heydler indicated that all phases of the affair will be thoroughly probed.

Should the meeting with Heydler fail to bring about Carey's reinstatement, it seemed likely that the Brooklyn Dodgers would claim him via the waiver route.

Philadelphia and Boston are said to have turned thumbs down on Carey, mainly because of his big contract which is reported to call for $15,000 a year.

On the other hand, Brooklyn is said to be eager to sign Carey to patrol centre field.

Heydler Hears Carey's Case Presented This Morning

Pittsburgh, Aug. 17 (A.P.).—John A. Heydler, president of the National League, today was cast in the central role in the latest—and perhaps the final—chapter of the sensational story of dissension between players and managers of the Pittsburgh Pirates, which has resulted in the dismissal of three veterans from the champion's ranks.

President Heydler consented to hold a hearing in Pittsburgh today in an effort to clear up the situation growing out of the suspension of Max Carey, veteran Cubsrie field captain, pending action on waivers which have been asked upon him, and the unconditional release of Babe Adams and Carson Bigbee. The hearing was scheduled for 11 30 this morning. All three ousted players were expected to be present as were several Pirate officials.

Heydler's decision to come here followed an appeal presented in New York yesterday by Carey, acting as spokesman for the trio, in which it was charged the Pirate management had treated them "unjustly and adjusted without granting them a hearing. Their dismissal followed discovery of a movement, which they were said to have been the leaders, to have Fred C. Clarke, vice-president and assistant manager of the bench. Carey first appealed to Kanesaw M. Landis, Commissioner of Baseball, who advised him to take his case to President Heydler.

The league president then consented to conduct a hearing presumably on Carey's contention that he and his two teammates were not guilty of insubordination, the specific charges upon which their dismissal was based.

Tagging All Bases

BY International News Service

Although his rival, Hack Wilson, took the lead in the race for home run honors in the National League by clouting his seventeenth and eighteenth homers, Sunny Jim Bottomley delivered a single with the bases loaded in the ninth which enabled the Cardinals to down the Cubs, 5 to 4. The Redbirds now trail the Pirates by only a game and a half.

Detroit and the White Sox battled to a scoreless tie for the second successive day. Lyons and Gibson yielded three hits in ten innings.

After Van Gilder of the Browns had held the Red Sox to four hits, beating them 6 to 1, Slim Harriss equalized St. Louis 7 to 1 in a seven inning affair. A case of fratricide marked the second game, when Alex Gaston, Red Sox catcher, came to bat with bases full and jarred his brother Milton, pitching for the Brownies, with a triple that sewed up the game.

The vanguard of the world's greatest assemblage of motorcycle racers is now quartered at the Rockingham Motor Speedway, at Salem, N. H., where on Saturday afternoon, at 1 o'clock, more than fifty of these speed demons will vie with one another to establish new records for two-wheeled gasoline chariots.

One of the first to arrive yesterday was Jim Davis, famous member of the Indian team, and holder of records for varying distances on the motorcycle.

Davis' arrival was co-incident to that of E. C. Smith, official starter for the American Motorcycle Association, under whose sanction the races of next Saturday are being held.

Jim Davis is the holder of the Speedway record of 117.9 miles per hour, made at the Altoona, Pa., track recently.

Helen Wills Continues as Leader in Hub Popularity Poll

The Hearst Popularity Contest presents the same general outlook that it did when we last left it, with Dick Howell, the swimmer, leading the nation-wide totals and Helen Wills, the defaulting tennis champion, continuing to sweep the New England territory.

Helen has slightly increased her lead over Babe Ruth, now being 32 points ahead of the slugging Bambino, and these two remain more than three hundred votes in front of all other candidates.

Throughout the country the voting takes a somewhat different appearance, with the contestants lining up as follows: Dick Howell, first; Babe Ruth, second; Helen Wills, third and Red Grange, fourth.

Helen's New England total is 740 to 780 for Ruth, 580 for Bobby Jones, and 260 for Glenna Collett.

DEMPSEY SHOWS GAIN.

The biggest gain was made by Jack Dempsey, who now seriously threatens the fourth place position held by Miss Collett since the contest opened. The Tiger of the Ring has accumulated 247 ballots, but 13 behind the girl golfer, and at the rate he has been gaining it would appear that he will soon slip into fourth place.

Gertrude Ederle is following Jack, and Charles Paddock trails in 7th place, completing the list of real contenders, the only ones whose totals boast three digits.

In response to repeated requests from fans and voters, the Boston Evening American will publish at an early date a complete list of all the athletes who have received votes. To conserve space the also-rans are not included in the daily totals.

PAT CREEDON TO ENTER BOSTON COLLEGE

Paddy Creedon, sensational school boy athlete from Brockton High School, will matriculate at Boston College this Fall. It was said he was to cast his lot with either Notre Dame or Dartmouth.

Creedon is referred to as one of the greatest schoolboy halfbacks the East has ever seen.

Paddy's ability is not limited to football alone; he is equally prominent in both basketball and baseball. Two years ago after the annual Tufts tournament he was chosen as the all New England forward and was the chief reason for his team copping the championship that year.

The Brockton kid is now playing with the Hyannis Club of the Cape Cod League, of which Freddy Moncewicz is the playing manager. The two are making the Codders sit up and take notice by their snappy combination play around the keystone sack, and reports coming from the cranberry sections indicate that B. C. will have a pair of infielders equal to the famous Holy Cross duet of Gautreau and Cote.

In his four years of school at the Shoe City high this youth garnered ten letters and could have added two more to the total had he not devoted his last year to studies in anticipation of his entering college.

He has captained baseball, football and basketball at Brockton and can tear off a mean hundred-yard dash, although basketball has always had the preference in the Whiter Maybe if Jess Hodder can induce the boy to try his hand at the track game he will give Frank Hussey a run for his money in the century. It looks as though the authorities at the Newton school will have another Darling in their athletic annals.

Huggins Predicts Hard Fight for Yanks as Season Wanes

New York, Aug. 17.—Miller Huggins, little manager of the New York Yankees, feels that he has a big job in front of him despite his team's long lead in the American League.

"We must win half of our remaining thirty-six games to be safe," he argues, "and the way we went last week even that is going to be hard. Cleveland can't take many beatings, that's true, but we'll have to fight every team all the way to be sure of the flag."

Sam Jones, the sad serrer, has come into his own during the last month while other Yank mound men faltered. For four weeks he has gone without defeat in games that he started. He had one setback in a contest he finished at Washington last week when Ben Tate hit for the circuit.

Jimmy Henigan day will be observed at the Malden high school athletic field on August 28. For the first time in his 18 years of racing "Smiling Jimmy" will be honored by his fellow athletes and friends. The Quincy Club of Malden is sponsoring the entertainment.

Henigan will face a field of the best distance runners available in an effort to break the American record for one hour's running. Clarence De Mar and probably Whitey Michelson will compete.

The program will include open handicap events at 100 yards, 440 yards, 1 mile and one mile.

FANS CROWN RED CHAPMAN AS FEATHERWEIGHT KING

4,191 VOTE FOR VICTOR IN CONTEST

Nearly 20,000 Ballots Cast in Boston Evening American Boxing Title Test

By JACK CONWAY

RED CHAPMAN is the choice of the fans of New England for the title of world's featherweight champion. He received a vote of 4,191 in the Boston Evening American's poll

Jack Conway

Sammy Fuller, colorful North End featherweight and regarded by many experts as the greatest prospect in the featherweight class, finished in second place, only nineteen votes behind Chapman.

Close to 20,000 ballots were cast. Half of the votes were received during the two closing days of the contest when supporters for the rival featherweights released big bundles of votes which they had been holding.

Chick Suggs was third, Honeyboy Finnegan fourth, Newport Johnny Brown fifth, Babe Herman sixth, Johnny Dundee seventh, Benny Bass eighth, Leo (Kid) Roy ninth and Jack Glick tenth. The final vote follows:

Red Chapman	4,191
Sammy Fuller	4,175
Chick Suggs	2,996
Honeyboy Finnegan	2,916
Newport Johnny Brown	1,318
Babe Herman	812
Johnny Dundee	791
Benny Bass	315
Leo (Kid) Roy	812
Joe Glick	151
Total vote	18,183

THERE was more interest in this poll than in any similar contest ever held in this country. The shabby treatment handed Red Chapman by the New York Athletic Commission and the fact that Fuller, Suggs and Finnegan, also outstanding contenders, are also New England boys, stimulated interest in the poll.

The Boston Evening American's campaign to secure recognition for New England's featherweights has frustrated the efforts of the New York Athletic Commission to nominate the world's featherweight champion. They have abandoned their efforts to stage a series of elimination bouts. New York newspaper writers admit that a series of bouts without Chapman competing would be a joke.

BOSTON will be the scene of a series of bouts which will cast some real light on the featherweight situation. Red Chapman and Honeyboy Finnegan will engage in the first test of ability when they clash at a Suffolk A. A. show on August 24. Fuller, Suggs and Newport Johnny Brown will later show their class.

LEADERS IN EVENING AMERICAN'S POLL TO DECIDE WORLD'S FEATHERWEIGHT CHAMPION

Honeyboy and Red Are Ready for Big Bout

SHADES of George Dixon, Johnny Griffin, Hank Brennan, Young Griffo, Kid Goodman and some of our famous featherweights of the dim and misty past!

How those famed ring gladiators would enthuse if they but could have lived a quarter of a century beyond their time.

Now they would have viewed with amazement the coming feather weight duel between Red Chapman of Chelsea and Dick (Honeyboy) Finnegan of Dorchester.

Never in the annals of New England boxing has there been the immense interest in a contest between native featherweights that is being evinced in the bout next week between the Chelsea Hebrew and the Dorchester Irish lad.

Never have the patrons of boxing in Boston been so evenly divided in their allegiance, and when the red haired youth from Chelsea, master of beating fingers, climbs into the Suffolk A. A. ring at Braves Field next week against the lean, gangling southpaw artist from Dorchester it is estimated that upwards of 30,000 rabid partisans will be ranged about the ring to cheer themselves hoarse in encouragement of their favorite.

The intense rivalry between the principals and their army of friends and admirers has probably never been exceeded. Eddie Shevlin, Mel Siegel, Young Kirby and Young Muggsy enjoyed large and loyal followings, but none of them boasted of the hords of sympathizers that will congregate at Braves Field next Tuesday night.

Jack Sharkey and Jim Maloney in their famous bout at Braves Field in June, 1925, drew the largest crowd in the history of New England fistic cuffs. The late Abe Friedman and Pancho Villa were the magnets that attracted another big crowd, while Miolin and Zivic, Malone and Wilson, and Shevlin and Siegel drew large "gates," but no two featherweights not excepting Johnny Dundee and Chapman, ever created the stir that next week's contest between Finnegan and Chapman has aroused.

WHILE the local fans are talking of little else than the outcome of the Chapman-Finnegan match, the ten round semi-windup between Sammy Fuller the aggressive, hard hitting and popular North End featherweight, and Johnny Brown, champion of Great Britain, is not far behind from the standpoint of interest.

Fuller, Suggs and Newport Johnny Brown will later show their class.

Inside Golf

Bookeeing is a fau r that comes on a golfer like the flu and lasts longer usually. Instead of getting rid of it, the player usual ly acquires it. Because of the desperate efforts he makes for a cure. The up sets are whole game. A number of things can cause socketing. One is a hait rabid partisans will be ranged about the ring to cheer themselves hoarse in encouragement of their favorite. rubbed gets to the and instead of whipping into the ball. Another is an uncon scious idea pushing forward with the body toward the ball. This naturally pushes the clubhead sideward so the ball is hit with the socket of the clubhead. If this is the cause of a case of socketing, go back to the original principle of swinging the clubhead, not the body. The best way to get back to a rhythmic swing is to begin with short wrists in practice, and gradually work up.

PLEON Y. C. WILL STAGE JUNIOR RACES

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Future greats of the yacht racing scene will loom when the young stars of Marblehead race in competition for the Salter Plate, which event starts today under the direction of the Pleon Yacht Club of Marblehead.

The Salter Plate is emblematic to the mid get sailing championship of Marblehead and is open to crews of yacht clubs of that seaport.

There is no restriction to crew membership as long as they range not younger than twelve and not over sixteen years of age. It is expected that many of the midget fleet sailors will be girls who have for the past couple of months sailed about Marblehead with their more experienced folks or one of the instructors of the different yacht clubs.

The Salter Plate is the gift of Richard J. Salter of the advisory board of the Pleon Yacht Club. This trophy must be won by a club three times before that club can become permanent owner of said trophy. Last year was the first time that this race was ever held and the honors went to the crew of the Eastern Yacht Club with Nathaniel M. Goodhue as the skipper.

Each yacht club in Marblehead will be permitted to enter as many as two crews in the kids' classes which starts today as an elimination event, and continues throughout each day until some crew wins the title.

Eyes from all sections of the country are expected from a distance on the annual cruise of the New York Yacht Club which starts today with assembly of yachts at New London. Everything is in readiness and the awaiting of Commodore George Nichols will greet the reception committee and flag officers aboard his craft just before the start.

Chief interest in the New York Yacht Club cruise is the appearance of the two famous racing schooners Vanitie and Resolute with their remodeled rigging with a marked change in the staysail inhaksup.

Three big races are scheduled for the cruise, the Astor Cup, King's Cup and Navy Challenge Cup races.

Youthful Golfers in Title Fight

Providence, R. I., July 17.—Fifty-five golfers, all under the age of 18 years, will go after the junior championship of the State in the competitive starts this morning at the Wannamoisett Country Club.

Though so many aspirants for the honor will now adorns the brow of Fred Bentley have entered, at least a dozen more hope to go into the tournament.

These are Wannamoisett caddies, who have neglected to get in touch with Mr. Affleck, trusting to luck that he will be good-natured and let them in.

CHANGE IN 'TWI' SCHEDULE ANNOUNCED

Because a ring is installed for the Dilboy bouts at Tufts Oval, Johnny Norton of the Somerville Twi team has called off his game against Lynn scheduled at the Oval this evening. Norton's team will play Malden instead, in a game that was called last evening on account of rain.

Lynn Mayor Orders Ban On Fistic Bouts in Parks

Boxing among schoolboys on the playgrounds of Lynn is the latest municipal activity to feel the big stick wielded by Mayor Ralph S. Bauer.

Mayor Bauer, in a letter to Park Commissioner Alfred Comstock, condemned "slugging matches and prize-fighting" and ordered immediate cessation of the type of bouts, he says, Playground Instructor Kelley is conducting.

"Have good healthy matches, if you want to, but eliminate all knockouts and slugging," wrote the Mayor. "Parents do not pay taxes to have their children learn how to pummel each other unmercifully."

Commissioner Comstock began an inquiry to ascertain the facts.

Runyon Says:

The Eyes Never Agree See Things Differently Berlenbach and Delaney What Was the First Blow? The Stories Are Varied

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1926, by International Features Service, Inc.)

YOU probably think you know what you see.

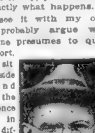
I mean to say you view an occurrence, and you are pretty sure you know exactly what happens.

"Didn't I see it with my own eyes?" you probably argue with heat, if anyone presumes to question your report.

Yet a man sitting alongside of you and viewing the same occurrence may see it in an entirely different way.

He thinks you are crazy, and you KNOW he is out of his mind.

Lawyers will tell you that if a jury of twelve sane, intelligent, dispassionate men were to sit looking at a murder, they would turn in at least seven different versions of the occurrence.



Damon Runyon

And in sport more than in anything else in life visual disagreement true, if the occurrence is a matter of rapid action such as a baseball play, or a boxing bout. Still, I have also known of it in such a slow-motion sport as boat racing.

I have heard a carload of boating experts arguing the question as to whether there was open water between a brace of racing shells, with the picture right before their eyes.

SUPPOSE I have heard a hundred different versions of what happened in the famous baseball game of 1908 between the Giants and the Chicago Cubs when Fred Merkle failed to touch second base, and few of these versions agreed.

They were the stories of the spectators, men of more than ordinary intelligence, men of keen eyesight, men who had their eyes glued on the play as it transpired, and after it was all over some said this, and some said that. A lot of them even made solemn affidavit of their version of the incident, and they undoubtedly sincerely believed they had seen it just as they said.

Yet, in after years, I believe, most of the versions were found quite incorrect. What actually happened wasn't at all what they thought they saw happen.

I have watched football games and heard newspapermen alongside of me dictating a statement of a play quite contrary to the way I thought I saw the same play. Time and again it has happened that a hundred or more close observers have agreed on some such play as a forward pass, only to learn the next day from the actual participants in the play that they were quite wrong.

IN boxing bouts men at the ringside often disagree on blows exchanged. One man will see a boxer go down from a right hand chop to the chin, while his neighbor will see it as a left hook. And both think they are right. For that matter, who shall say who is right?

In a recent encounter between Mr. Paul Berlenbach and M. Gyula Chapdelaine, otherwise Jack Delaney, I glibly informed my omniverous public of the opening incident of the battle as follows:

I borrowed that word "feinted" from the English. It sounded different to me. "Feinting" means to poke lightly, as I understand it.

Now we will allow that there might be a wide difference of opinion as to what happens in the heat of a bout, when the men are mixing things up lively. No boxing writer pretends that his round-by-round story of a fight details EVERY blow exchanged by the boxers.

It would be an impossibility. The blows fly too rapidly for eye and tongue to follow them in a brisk bout. So the writer merely picks out the high spots. The man doesn't live who can dictate a round-by-round story of a fight and mention EVERY blow.

STILL, you might think it would be easy enough for every one at the ringside to see the FIRST blow, wouldn't you? They were closely watching every move of the boxers and all keyed up for that opening gesture. It doesn't seem possible there could be any visual variation there, does it?

Well, I compared my M. Delaney's fibbing with a long, light left to the stories of my brother members of the Boxing Writers' Association the next day and here is how we didn't agree:

Tribune—Delaney shot out two light lefts that didn't land.

Times—They exchanged light lefts to the face.

Evening World—The champion charged and dug a right to the ribs.

AND there you are.

Who was right? I give it up.

However, I claim that we ohmy-lolers were more correct in our respective versions than a veteran ringworm who viewed the struggle from a ringside seat. I asked him what was the first of the battle as he saw it and he said:

"Why, they both led their rights and missed."

HARVARD ADMITS THREE SCHOOLBOY ATHLETES

Three of the leading schoolboy athletic lights of this vicinity have been accepted at Harvard this week. They are Red Barrett of Worcester Academy, Guy Holbrook of Newton High School, and Francis Nugent of Brighton High.

Barrett proved himself a fine football player at Worcester, Holbrook has proven his hockey ability at Newton, Nugent was ranked second to Eddie McGrath among the Boston schoolboy shortstops this past season. Nugent was awarded a scholarship at Harvard yesterday, having been one of the scholastic leaders of his class at Brighton High.

BOSTON LIGHT SWIM NEXT SUNDAY

The Boston Light swim, to be held under the auspices of the L Street "Brownies" next Sunday, is the event on which the interest of all Greater Boston swimmers is centered.

Several swimmers of national prominence will be in the competition and it is expected that the time record for the distance will be broken. Scores of swimmers are training for the race, making the L street bathhouse, South Boston, their headquarters.

So many prizes have been donated for the race that it is likely every entrant will receive a trophy. The most coveted prize is a large silver loving cup, the gift of Attorney William C. Prout, former president of the Amateur Athletic Union and a famous athlete himself.

Frank Cavanaugh of Brighton, whose chances of winning the race he once considered excellent, swam across orchester Bay and return to the L street beach in practice.

Vinton and Blaney Win Pure-Pro

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 17.—Donald Vinton of Plymouth, Mass., and Bill Blaney of Meadow Brook won the amateur-pro golf tourney of the New England professional golfers' organization at the Manchester Country Club course. Their total gross was 139 for the 36 holes and with a three handicap their net was 136.

Vinton and Blaney were eligible for only one prize, that of low gross, and the low net was divided among three pair, tied with net cards of 138. They were Willie Ogg and Eddie Obrien of Worcester, Jock Macdie Andrews of Blue Ridge, Winthrop, Mass., and Wilfred A. Oulmet of Norfolk and Alex Ellis of United Shoe of Beverly and Dr. Alling of Vespers.

Jock MacAndrews sank a full mashie for a deuce on the 461-yard hole.

ALLAN AND SULKIN WIN BOYS' DOUBLES OF BOSTON

The finals of the boys' doubles in the city of Boston Park Department tennis tournament were played yesterday at Franklin Field

Leo Allan and George Sulkin defeated George Price and Mark Alsner in the boys' doubles final in straight sets, 6—4, 8—3, 6—4

The boys' doubles match featured the tournament. Allan and Sulkin set out to win yesterday with a rush that swept Price and Alsner off their feet. Attempting to recover lost ground, Price and Alsner played fine tennis for a while, but the unfailing steadiness of Allan and Sulkin more than offset brilliant shots

Boxing Notes

Again the weather man tossed in the wet-known sponge and knocked the twilight and moonlight right out of the Jimmy Delaney in exhibition bouts only because of the fact that the St. Paul battler is connected with his training corps of scrappers.

Reddy Mason of Pittsburgh and Jimmy Johnson are in reality two grapplers, both challenging to hold whatever laurels Harry Greb of Pittsburgh owns in the ring. The courts hold that Mason is still Grebs' legal manager. The New York Boxing Commission, which is like the weather, changeable, upholds Harry Greb and claims that Johnson has full right to manage the Pittsburgh ring warrior.

Greb and Tiger Flowers are meeting in a return match in New York on Thursday night and the matter may be decided after the battle. Although Greb has been in strict training since his defeat at the hands of Tiger Flowers in their last go, when the latter gained the title, those close to the boxing game believe the Georgia Parson should retain defeat Harry

JUNIOR YACHT RACES AT LONG ISLAND TODAY

Stamford, Ct., Aug. 17.—Boys and girls representing twelve yacht clubs on Long Island Sound assembled for the first series of the third junior championship races of the Long Island Sound Junior Yacht Racing Association off Indian Harbor, Greenwich.

The crews were drawn by Yacht Instructor B. H. Willard and were subdivided into three types of boats, the Interclub, three A boats and two Stamford one design. An effort was made to sail a race but two boats broke down in the blow, necessitating postponement until today.

The races are being handled by Yacht Instructor B. H. Willard of Indian Harbor Yacht Club, W. F. Gillespie of Stamford, C. C. Smith Shoe of Beverly and Dr. Alling of Vespers.

Jock MacAndrews sank a full mashie for a deuce on the 461-yard hole.

BRONSON-BROWN PILOT FOUR BOXING BROTHERS

New York, Aug. 17.—Brothers are by no means rare in fistic circles, but the novelty of two sets of brothers operating under the same management is considerably out of the ordinary.

The Jimmy Bronson-Lou Brown troupe of leather pushers includes Jack and Pete Zivic and Jack and Joey Kaltkich. Strictly speaking, all four boys hail from Pittsburgh, all four are of the same nationality—Croatian—and all four are former amateur stars. And, to make the coincidence complete, Jack Zivic and Jack Kaltkich are welterweights, while Pete Zivic and Joey Kaltkich are bantams.

LEW TENDLER TO TACKLE JOE RENO IN PHILLY

Philadelphia, Aug. 17 (A P.)—Lew Tendler, Philadelphia ring veteran, and Joe Reno of Trenton, who fought a bitterly contested ten-round bout recently, have been rematched for the next program to be waged at the home of the Athletics, Shibe Park, on September

They will meet in one of the three ten-round bouts which will precede the featherweight encounter between Benny Bass of this city and Babe Herman of New York.

PRIDDY, AMHERST GRID STAR, MAY NOT RETURN

Amherst, Aug. 17.—Amherst football prospects received another severe jolt with the announcement that Newt Priddy of Findlay, O., one of the two veteran backs from last Fall's championship Little Three eleven, may not return to college when Coach Henry F. (Dad) White issues the first call for candidates September 12. Coach White succeeds Raymond (Tuss) McLaughry, who last Winter signed as head coach with Brown University

With the loss of Priddy, who was rated for the past two years as the Purple's one line-smashing halfback Captain Cadigan will be the only returning first string back

Merrill and Creden, latter men from any Purple gony backfield, will return, but Creden may be forced out by an injury sustained last Fall.

Boxing Bosses Wash Hands Of Dempsey License Tangle

By DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Editor.

New York Aug 17.—The New York State Athletic Commission will take no further action, in the law courts or otherwise, to bring about the much-discussed bout between Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, and the contender for the title, Gene Tunney.

This was made clear at a meeting of the commission today when Commissioner George E. Brower declared that the boxing commission was an administrative body solely, and was not the aggrieved party to the action of the license commission in denying Dempsey a license to box in this State.

The fighter himself or Tex Rickard his promoter, Brower said were the aggrieved parties and it was their place if anyone is to bring Mandamus proceedings in court to force the license committee to show cause why Dempsey should not be permitted to box here.

Brower went over the entire affair in detail, stressing the fact that the commission had given its sanction to the bout, licensed the promoter, attended to all details, and that the contending fighter, Tunney, had been duly licensed and passed upon to meet the champion next September 16

Brower made a motion, which was seconded and passed, that the opinion of New York State Attorney-General Albert Ottinger, which questioned the right of the License Committee to refuse Dempsey permission to fight, be incorporated in the records of the commission

Commissioner Farley dissented, claiming th opinion was an individual opinion and not an individual, but the motion was passed. Another of Brower's motions—that a copy of the opinion be furnished the License Committee, and that body be given free access to the original draft of Ottinger's decision, also was passed

Commissioner Brower declined to pass any legal opinion as to whether the License Committee could be held civilly liable in a suit brought against it on the basis of its refusal to sanction the champion. He also refused to venture an opinion as to whether the time between now and the proposed date of the bout would be sufficient for a carrying through of a legal action.

Jack Optimistic

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 17 (I.N.S.).—Jack Dempsey, in training at Tommy Luther's White Sulphur Springs Camp here, is confident of the outcome of his projected battle with Gene Tunney.

"I'm sure the license will be granted and that we will fight in this State," he said today, "just as sure as I am that I will still be champion when the fight is over. I am in fine condition now and by the tenth of September I expect to be in the best shape I ever was."

TUNNEY POINTS TO DEMPSEY'S WEAKNESS

This is the third of a series of articles written by Gene Tunney exclusively for the Boston Evening American. The next will appear on Friday

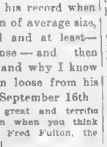
By GENE TUNNEY

JACK DEMPSEY is a very ferocious person when faced by dubs, or big, clumsy men of the prize ring.

But look at his record when he tackled men of average size, average speed and at least—fairish defense—and then you'll understand why I know I'll knock him loose from his titled hat on September 16th

Dempsey's a great and terrific hitting champion when you think of the quitting Fred Fulton, the lumbering Carl Morris, the fat and flabby Joe Willaird and the wild swinging Luis Firpo.

But why not think a bit concerning Tom Gibbons and Bill Brennan? And you might take a thought or two about diminutive Jim Flynn, and Willie Meehan and Jack Downey and Johnny Sudenberg and Andy Malloy



Gene Tunney

MEDIOCRE OPPOSITION.

Excepting Brennan, who was Dempsey's size, they were all smaller than the champion. With about two or three exceptions, they were dubs. They didn't know much about defense

All they had was a little speed. They used it to keep out of Dempsey's way most of the time, and when they couldn't, they just rode his punches—and were on their feet at the end.

If Billy Miske, at his best—not when he was the sick man of 1926—could stay the distance TWICE with Dempsey, why can't I do it—and a little bit more?

If Gibbons, the man I knocked out, could stay 15 rounds, and hold to his feet throughout, despite opposition from this "terrific hitting" Dempsey, what logic says I can't do likewise—and a little bit better.

Bill Brennan never was fast—but he was clever. I think I have it on Bill in speed. I'm told I have more defensive skill than he has. I think I punch harder—and that I can take it better.

Kearns Reveals Deal That Gave Carpentier Title Chance

THIS is the thirty-second chapter of Jack Kearns' thrilling story in which he replies to the charges of Jack Dempsey. It is the first time that the man who put Jack Dempsey on the pugilistic map tells of his experiences when he took a prize fighter. Read this story every day in the Boston Evening American.

By JACK KEARNS

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

WHEN I came to New York with the Carpentier match in mind I opened offices and took Dan McKetrick in as an assistant. McKetrick was known to Carpentier and Descamps as he had brought Willie Lewis and Joe Jeannette to Paris, both of whom fought Carpentier when the latter was going at his best.

Before arriving in New York I had tipped Tex off to my plan, simply by telling him to match Dempsey with Carpentier. He had wired back, "Impossible. Carpentier tied up with Cochrane of London."

I came flying to New York, talked the situation over with Tex and got "Impossible" as his best offering when I talked Carpentier and Dempsey.

I left Tex determined to land it myself. I asked McKetrick to get Descamps and Carpentier to come to my office. In they came with their friend, Captain Mallet.

I asked Descamps if he was tied up with Cochran. I was tickled when he admitted that his contract was simply a verbal one, a gentleman's agreement to box any man Cochran selected. Carpentier was to get $40,000 for his end

"Why that's no money for the great champion of yours," I told Descamps through Kellet. "It's perfectly absurd to ask it a international favorite to meet some egg over there and get only forty grand." I talked myself blue in the face. Carpentier and Descamps held tight to the notion that they couldn't break faith with a man of Cochran's standing. I insisted that business was business.

"Would you accept $200,000 to fight someone for me if I got Cochran to release you from that gentleman's agreement?" I asked both Carpentier and Descamps.

DESCAMPS SKEPTICAL.

That sounded like something, but Descamps said there wasn't that kind of money any place in all the wide world

I asked to be excused and going out into an adjoining room I called up William A. Brady. He had been associated with Cochran in the production of the production of American plays in London and was his partner abroad.

Georges Carpentier

I got Brady on the 'phone. Would he and Cochran be interested in a Dempsey and Carpentier match in England?

"Yes, sir." He jumped at the proposition.

"Yes, yes. We'll be interested. There's more money in a bout of that character in London than there would be here." Can you imagine what glib Billy Brady throwing us down for London?

"We'd like to promote that bout in London," says Brady.

I knew that Carpentier and Descamps had backed Georges Carpentier in England and were to sail shortly. I told them I had to be moved as a gallop or the bride would fly out of the window on me.

I went back into the other office and Descamps, Carpentier, Mallet and McKetrick, with his Tenth Avenue French, were going it hell bent for election.

I made a date to meet Descamps and Carpentier in the morning. They left and I rushed off to have a close up with Brady. He had called Cochrane at his hotel. The papers had been full of it. Cochran is coming and his having Carpentier under contract

When Brady pulled the match business on Charley he was hot for it. A short talk with Brady and he agreed to meet me in Cochran's room at the latter's hotel. I was no sooner ushered in when in walked Descamps, Carpentier and Mallet.

KEARNS IS DIPLOMAT.

"Mr. Cochran," I began as Brady introduced us: "It has been my misfortune never to have met you before this. I know all about you and your reputation for being England's squarest shooter, a man of your word, a sportsman without a peer in your own land and it is indeed a privilege to take your hand." I got a hold of Charley's big, fat paw.

"Your agreement calls for $40,000 to meet any man you select. You've expressed a desire to pit Dempsey against him but you must realize that $40,000 is no money at all for Carpentier. He's worth much more."

WILLS BLAMES BOXING CRITICS FOR TROUBLE

This is the fourteenth of a series of articles written by Harry Wills exclusively for the Boston Evening American. Tomorrow Wills tells of his battle with Tut Jackson in a Brooklyn ring.

By HARRY WILLS

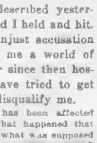
CHAPTER XIV.

MANY persons have accused me of fouling Fulton in that fight I described yesterday. They said I held and hit.

It was an unjust accusation that has done me a world of harm, for ever since then hostile referees have tried to get an excuse to disqualify me.

My fighting has been affected ever since by what happened that night or rather what was supposed to have happened. New Yorkers have never seen me fight as I can fight.

I am always so afraid of the referee that I can't cut loose. I never hold in my fights. You can't get anywhere by holding. Holding is done by the man on the defensive. Everyone who has seen me fight around New York will have to admit that I have never been on the defensive.



Harry Wills

In California, before twenty-round fights went out, we used to box under rules that called for you to protect yourself at all times and the spectators saw some real fights.

The rules now in force were made for the purpose of eliminating clinching, but the effect has been exactly opposite to that intended. What is the first thing a boxer thinks of when he gets hit hard? To grab and hold on.

By the time the referee tears the men apart, a great deal of time is lost and the dazed man has a chance to recover. As soon as the referee breaks them, the boxer who is on the defensive dives right back into another clinch, knowing that he has nothing to fear.

Under rules that call for boxers to protect themselves at all times, what happens? When one of the men is dazed or hurt by a blow he dares not clinch because he knows he will get beaten up just the same if he comes in close. He is forced to depend on footwork, blocking and ducking.

WISE and OTHERWISE

By STED CHANDLER

THEY would have us believe that Harvard and Michigan are planning a little get-together movement, although authentic data on this subject is as scarce as digits in the Crimson win column.

They would have us believe also that Harvard posts a coup d' etat which will shatter the long-standing Big Three tradition, by giving the Princeton football team the cold, cold air.

Denials from Harvard and Princeton and a tacit statement from Michigan saying that the Crimson would be welcomed to help dedicate the new Wolverine Stadium comprise the sum total of information available.

Neither a large nor an impressive total

TO the unveiled eye it would not seem to be a most propitious time for Harvard to spring a revolution in Big Three circles. Whether you like it or not, the only time to dictate is when you're safely on top of the pile. Harvard is not

If the serious minds in Cambridge believe that a Big Three disruption would cause no hullabaloo, they should be allowed three more guesses.

Aside from the fact that it might not be a bad action in the long run and that the Big Three has grown to be merely a moniker, it is the moniker of a deep-rooted and highly cherished tradition, and by no means an undesirable tradition. One should think twice before one indulges in such revolutions.

2 WIVES CLAIM DEAD JOCKEY

Chicago, Aug. 17 (I.N.S.).—The inquest into the death of Jockey Joe Murray, who has been racing at the Lincoln Fields and Washington Park tracks, was continued today, when two women claimed the body. Each claimed to be the wife of the rider.

Murray was killed shortly after he had left a woman supposed to be his wife at St. Luke's Hospital, where she was placed under observation.

The other woman, said to be the second wife of the jockey, claimed the body today. A short time later the woman in the hospital also claimed the body.

That's a question that many find it hard to answer, my dear. I think price and better in quality. If you do your marketing yourself perhaps you see baskets of gorgeous peaches that tempt one into culinary waiers as yet undiscovered by many.

Peach desserts are delicious and I am sure will be popular with every member of the family. Many of the recipes are easily prepared and well worth while.

Peach and Orange Marmalade—Peel 24 peaches, remove the stones and cut them in thin slices. Wash and peel 4 oranges cut the rind into thin strips, and the oranges themselves into small pieces. Combine all and add three and one half pounds of sugar.

Let stand covered overnight. In the morning bring the mixture grad ually to the boiling point and simmer gently until thick and the consistency of marmalade—about two hours. Pour into clean, hot, sterilized glasses.

Peach Chutney. Soak 1½ pounds of evaporated peaches several hours in water to cover; then cut in small pieces. Peel 2½ pounds of fresh peaches and also cut in small pieces. Put 1 small onion and ½ pound te. juice until clear.)

Fruit Fritters—Mix and sift 1 cup flour 2 teaspoons sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, add beaten yolks of 2 eggs grated rind of 1 lemon and ½ cup milk. Beat and add 2 stiffly beaten whites of 2 eggs and use for all kinds of fruits.

Peach Jam. Mix 2 cups of flour, 4 cups of sugar, ½ teaspoon salt and one teaspoon soda. Add 1 tablespoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon nutmeg and 1 cup chopped nuts. Add 1 qt 2 cups sugar, 1 quart of sliced peaches and 1 teaspoon vinegar in bottom of buttered baking dish. Cover with flour mixture and steam forty-five minutes. Serve in dish in which it is cooked.

Jelled Peaches with Macaroons—Soften one and one-fourth tablespoonfuls of gelatine in two tablespoonfuls of cold water. Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of boiling water. Drain the juice from a pint can of peaches, and add enough water, if necessary, to make one cup. Add the dissolved gelatine, and sugar if needed; flavor with one teaspoonful of extract.

Cut the peaches into quarters, of if large into eighths, and place in a glass dish. Pour over the liquid jelly and set away to harden. When ready to serve, spread over the top one cup of heavy cream which has been sweetened, flavored and beaten until stiff. Over that sprinkle finely crushed macaroons.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Practical Hints on Spending by a Plan

$3.80 for savings and insurance, $4 for shelter, $10.80 for food, $3 for clothing, $4 for operating and $3.40 for personal, out of which you can pay $1 on the doctor's bill. I am sending you some recipe cook books.

Mrs. J. W. S. wants an individual Budget to help her save for old age. She deposits all money she receives from son's and daughter's board and draws check when needed. She pays bills as husband's time is limited. Her total income is $59. In buying a home at $22 in the co-operative bank, taxes on house and poll tax $142, water $3.60 a year, coal $150, insurance $7.60, husband's lunches $3.50, electricity $4, gas $2.50, telephone $3.35, milk $4.30 and food $17 to $25, lodge dues $10. Has a car and garage rent to pay.

A Standard Budget will give you $19 for shelter, including taxes and interest on the mortgage and business enterprise, $17 for food including milk bill and husband's business lunches, $8 for clothing, $8 for operating, $3 for savings and life insurance and $9 for personal.

You should be able to put by quite a bit for a comfortable old age.

Mothers of Famous Men

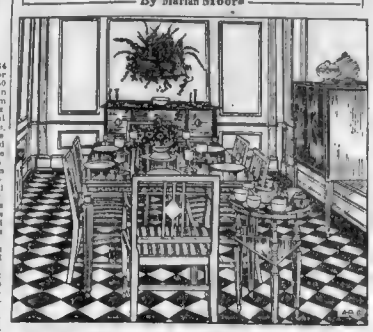
IT is certain that Stonewall Jackson, the famous Confederate General, owed few of his sterling characteristics to the influence of his father Jonathan Jackson was a gambler and a profligate who died leaving his family in one small room paid for by charity. His wife, the lovely Julia Neale, was left a widow with three children.

With no money for the upbringing of her children, it was only natural that this handsome and gifted woman should marry again. But the tragedy of the situation was that she married a Mr. Woodson who could not support them. Consequently the children were sent to live with their father's relatives.

Although Thomas Jackson, the boy who was later to startle the country by his prowess as a soldier and commander of men, saw little more of his mother after he was six years old, his affection for her was great. When she died, a year after her second marriage, her children were at her bedside, and the instructions she gave them made a lasting impression on Thomas Jackson. He said later that although he knew her such a short time "the wholesome impression of her divine instructions and prayers and of her triumph over the grave have never been erased from my heart."

Furnishing the Home

By Marian Moore



STRICTLY speaking this is not a guest picture, though I introduced it into this series to put you on your guard against the common belief that visitors enjoy being taken out to restaurants for their meals.

On the contrary guests are apt to relish exceeding the advantages of home life without its responsibilities, and a dinner at home is a refreshing halt between the afternoon and evening activities.

It gives the women a chance to slip into a cool loose frock and relax from the guarded attitude of public places.

To this, you should add the comfort of a suitably decorated dining room and the ease and poise of your own efficient behavior.

The dinner dress room should be liberated from all heavy over draperies and rugs. If it has a tile floor, you are fortunate indeed; if not, have a linoleum laid over the floor for your own sake.

The radiators should be concealed and forgotten under patented covers; and if a light fixture of the bowl type is used, ferns may be placed between the globes to supplement the table decoration.

Whether you employ a maid or not, you will find that a side table will add to the ease and dignity of your table manners. In the typical plan on account of the triangular shape, an oval would effect is always suggestive daintiness and elegance.

Use simple dotty sets flowery plates and colorful glassware.

Secrets of Health

Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOU may be perplexed by the problem of exercise for your young child.

It is really an important question and should not be treated lightly, especially while the child is at home with you; that is, before the school age and you alone are responsible for results.

Helen King, discussing this problem in "Hygiene," calls attention to the fact that many school children between the ages of six and sixteen suffer from poor posture, round shoulders, curved spine, flat feet. All these handicaps could probably have been prevented earlier in life. Babies get a curvature of the spine through being carried in the wrong position or sleeping in too short a crib.

Children sit and stand in the wrong position between the ages of three and five, and are often dressed badly; long garters attached to little underwaists to support the stockings are apt to make the child round shouldered by pressing on the shoulder straps.

Many children grow out of rickets, but the results remain. Some authorities think that 80 per cent of flat feet are the result of rickets in young children.

Outstanding defects of posture are a markedly protuberant abdomen, a hollow back, curvatures of the spine, flat feet, knock knees and bow legs. Cod liver oil and sunlight will cure rickets but for structural defects exercises are necessary. Children need to be kept fit by exercises just as much as adults.

RABBIT'S Foot for Luck—is an old omen, but the "Rabbit's Ears" for sports wear is an entirely new idea. Soft as the rabbit's ear is the knitted fabric, from which such extremely smart jumpers are made. With such jackets are worn pleated silk crepe skirts to match.

Wearing White Wraps—for sports and informal use, will become a habit among fashionably dressed women this Summer. White coats of all types of novelty knitted fabrics, are trimmed in clipped wool white grosgrain ribbon, or white fur, but the preference is given to the wool bandings. Zigzag weaves and square mesh are equally popular in the silk and wool effects, in which these stunning fabrics are developed.

Navy Varies Parasol Mode—by appearing in large applique flowers, upon a silk crepe automobile and sport parasol. Navy blue, is a stunning model covered in chiffon, these velvet trimmed parasols are copies of those carried at the smartest resort rental resorts, originating in Paris.

Appearance is just as important in school

FIRST impressions of classmates are most important to a boy entering school. For they are apt to lead to contacts, good or bad, which will greatly influence his later life.

That's why a boy should have a complete new school outfit for opening day— a snappy, durable tweed with double breasted vest and extra long trousers or knickers perhaps, sport sweater and becoming cap—that he may feel and look his manly self confidence.

Right now, while styles are newest and stocks most complete, parents will find greatest values for cash or on deferred payments at reliable stores advertising boys' suits in the Boston American and Boston Advertiser.

About the Law of the Boomerang

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS.

BILLY BLAKE stood behind his small soda water stand and cried at the top of his voice: "Ice cold soda water! Five cents a bottle!"

Billy had made that stand himself, and he was as proud of it as any Wall street broker is of his seat on the exchange. It is true it was only a big box covered with white paper and set out in front of the Blake home under a very small tree, but it was Billy's own business and he attended to it. Every morning he placed the bottles in a tub of ice and salt so that they would be cold enough to please his customers. While the other boys were playing ball or going to the swimming pool Billy stayed right there and sold his cold drinks.

One morning it rained and, of course, Billy could not sell very much. But as soon as the sun came out he ran out to cry his wares and reap the nickels as they fell upon his stand.

Then along came Edward Delaney, who lived in a house on the hill above the Blake home.

"Ice cold soda water!" shouted Billy, hoping that Edward would stop. He did.

"What'll you have?" asked Billy, beaming good will upon the older boy.

"Give me a strawberry soda," replied Edward, and Billy dived into the bottom of the tub to get one that was ice-cold.

Edward drained the bottle and placed it back on the stand.

Billy waited for the money, but instead of paying for his drink the larger boy gave a hateful laugh and ran off down the street.

While Billy was fighting back the tears of anger and disappointment a young man stopped at the stand.

"I'll pay for his drink, sonny," said the man, "and you might sell me one, too, if you will drink it for me."

So the men dropped a dime into the cigar box, which was Billy's cash register, and went on his way.

Five years later an advertisement appeared one day in a newspaper saying that a high school boy was wanted to go to a camp as swimming instructor.

Edward Delaney answered the advertisement. He was an expert swimmer, and he came with letters from prominent people recommending him for the place. Edward wanted that job, too. He had reached the age when he yearned to make some money of his own, and he also wanted to go on the camping trip.

The man at the desk asked him several questions, looking closely at him all the while. Then suddenly a light dawned in his eyes.

"I was just trying to remember where I had seen you before," the man mused. "And I remember now." A few minutes later he said: "I'll let you hear from me later about the place as swimming instructor."

And when Edward did hear, it was a polite note informing him that the position had been filled.

The man was the same one who had seen Edward five years before, cheating little Billy Blake out of a five-cent piece. And he did not want any boy in his camp who would stoop to a thing like that.

The Law of the Boomerang!

A bad deed is just as certain to come back and slap the sinner in the face as the boomerang is sure to come back to its thrower. And it usually comes in the most unexpected and inopportune time.

If children could be convinced of this fact while they are still children, it would save them many heartaches, misfortunes, and what is commonly called "hard luck." Older people who do any thinking at all realize that whatever they send out of good or of evil will in some way come back to them. But it might be possible to drill the fact into the minds of the young and thus save them the misfortunes that they will otherwise bring upon themselves.

TARNISHED WINGS

(CHAPTER LIV

MERRY opened the front door.

"Those trunks are to go back to Mrs. Kaufman's house," she told the driver. "She doesn't want them here."

"What d'ye mean?" he asked. "Do you mean I've gotta drag them all back where I come from?"

Merry nodded. "That's it," she answered. "They'll pay you when you take them back."

As Merry turned away, Morley Kaufman was coming up the steps. "Hello, Morley," Merry greeted him, but her eyes were on Bill Erskine's figure.

He had not stirred from his place in the great closed car. He was hunched down in his seat, gazing straight in front of him as he puffed at his everlasting cigar.

If he had seen her, or heard her voice, he certainly gave no sign of it.

With a little toss of her bright head Merry darted down the steps and ran out to the car.

She opened the door and jumped into it.

"What's the matter with you, Bill Erskine?" she asked him. "Why be so up-stage? Weren't you even coming in to say 'Hello' to me? Cassie tells me you've been in town since yesterday."

"Been in town since Sunday," Bill informed her without the ghost of a smile. "Been here on business." He offered no excuse for not coming to see her.

"It must have been awfully important business," Merry remarked, after a minute or two, "to keep you from calling me up, at least."

Still jerked his cigar from his mouth, and savagely tossed it out of the window of the car.

Then he turned a pair of un friendly eyes on her. "How about tonight, then?" he asked roughly "Want to go out to dinner?"

It was not a cordial invitation. Not even a polite one. But Merry accepted it eagerly

"Six o'clock?" she asked. That was the time he usually called for her when he was going to take her out for the evening.

"Seven," he answered shortly, and she said goodby to him and got out of the car.

The door between the hall and the sitting room was shut when Merry went back into the house. But from behind it came the babble of high, excited voices—Moms' and Cassie's shrill soprano. Merry caught the words, "Fifi Pell," once or twice.

Then a pause. And then Morley's deep tones: "I won't discuss the thing with either of you. This is all I have to say—Cassie comes home now, with me, or she never comes. That's flat."

Then silence

Merry tiptoed up to the landing of the stairs, and stood there where she could hear without being seen

After two or three minutes Cassie's voice came again—not high and nasal, but strangled and thick as if she were crying.

And then, presently, the door flew open and out came all three, Moms and Cassie and Morley.

Moms' arm was around her daughter's shoulders, but Cassie broke away from her and came running up the stairs.

Merry flew up ahead of her Cassie's face was swollen with crying.

'What Were You Doing, Listening In,' Asked Cassie, Sobbing

"What were you doing, listening in?" she asked Merry between the sobs that still shook her.

"Are you going back home, really?" Merry answered her with a question of her own.

"I guess so," she said wearily "What else is there to do?" Her chin quivered. "I can't get along without Morley. I hate him, but I'm crazy about him, too."

"I never knew how much I did either after Fifi Pell," she added, looking up at her sister. "He can't be so awfully wild about her, or he wouldn't be here to take me home with him, would he?"

Her hard green eyes were actually wistful as she asked Merry the question. And Merry said she was sure Morley did not care a snap of his fingers about Mrs. Fell

"She can make love to a woman —and it doesn't mean a thing in their lives," she added, out of her young wisdom.

How many men had made love to her, in their time, without meaning anything

She thought them over as she kissed Cassie goodby—Lee Purcell, Cabby Marsh and Derrick Jones, and a dozen others whose very names she had half forgotten

From the window of the bedroom she could see Bill Erskine, still sitting in Morley's car. He had lit another cigar and was blowing the smoke out of the window beside him.

"And Bill Erskine," she said to herself, "I wonder what I mean to him. I wonder if I even meant anything to him but a good-looking girl for a petting party."

"Bill Erskine was with Morley," she told Moms and Lillie later. "What do you think of that? I didn't even know he was in town. I'm going out to dinner with him tonight. So I guess everything's all right with him and me again."

Lillie and Moms looked at her without speaking. Then Lillie got up and walked pompously out of the room.

"Did you see this piece about Les Purcell?" Lillie asked, when the door had closed behind him

She shoved the daily newspaper across the table to Merry. On the front page was a story about Les and Nonie Purcell.

The headlines seemed to spring out at the print at her.—"WIFE HINTS AT OTHER WOMAN"

The opening sentence struck terror to Merry's very soul. "Mrs. Nonis Purcell, who tried to commit suicide by taking poison last November, yesterday filed suit for divorce—"

"Oh, my soul—" she groaned and fell back in her chair. "To you suppose Les the 'other woman'? You don't think I did—did he—you?" Her eyes went from her mother's face to Lillie's, and they were like the eyes of a frightened, hunted animal

"I can soon find out. I can find out from Les or from Nonie," Lillie suggested hopefully. "And then you won't have to mix up in it at all."

"Argus with a mob!" I demanded sconfully, as I cried to force my way past his inexorable bulk.

"Why not?" the sheriff asked.

"Nobody can argue with a mob," I protested.

"How do you know? Ever deal with one?"

"But mobs are mad—hungry for blood. You can't reason with them. They are men reverting to savagery. Let me go to my Jim!"

"Lion tamers seem to handle fiercer beasts," McCandless replied unmoved.

"But my husband is a stranger. We came here under suspicion. You know that. They won't give him the benefit of the doubt. They will avenge Arletis—and tomorrow May will have a letter from Arletis in the city—to which the child was bent—"

"Would she go to the city in your husband's knickers and cap?"

"Merry," Merry said faintly as she opened it with a fruit knife.

When Gerry had finished it she sat statue-still for a minute. Then she flung the letter down on the table and looked scorns at her mother.

One corner of her mouth went up in a half-hearted smile.

"He—He says he's married," she said monotonously. "He married some girl I never heard of, down in Florida, a month ago."

Her head went down into her hands. Moms thought she was crying, but her eyes were dry.

There was no grief in her heart. Only a kind of race—a blind fury.

"I'll sue him!" she gasped. "I sue him for breach of promise. I will—just as sure as I'm alive and breathing!"

Keeping His Nose to Grindstone

DRAWN BY POPINI

LOVE and ambition—the twin emotions which make life worth living! Mind you, I don't mean that in a selfish, material way, for then they'd be worth less than nothing.

It is your idea of love keeping the loved one's nose to the grindstone that you may gratify your selfish ambitions of gain and glory; when you demand that which is almost beyond the reach of the loved one? Be honest, now—that isn't true love! And you know it! Just because someone else's loved one had it within his power to give cars, homes, jewels, all the material things that make for happiness when love is based on a selfish foundation, don't demand this of your lover. Don't keep his nose so constantly to the grindstone that what he may profit will be gained at the expense of your happiness.—POPINI.

Making of a Husband

By ANNE LISLE

THEY were at the windows now, glaring in. I could no more account for them than for the strange tale I had just told. I didn't know where I got the ideas that made me invent all the lies that accounted for the things that must be accounted for if I was to prove that Arletis went of her own free will—and alone

"You don't know what you are talking about," Jim flung over his shoulder.

And then he disappeared into the front hall, and I heard the knob turn and the lock click as he opened the door. In slow, poisonous hopelessness I realized how superb Jim's courage was. And in that moment I felt that whatever Jim had done was the act of a brave man and that I would be proud to stand by to the end—whatever that might be.

"What do you want, men?" I heard Jim ask.

And then the horrible, ominous lull that comes before a storm.

There was a horrible jumble of yells and hisses and screams and threats as the voice of the mob came in through the open door. Then the door slammed and something of the silence in the hall of the Birches told me that Jim had stepped outside and faced the mob.

I ran after him, but Mrs. McCandless blocked the way. I caught his arm in my hands and pleaded quietly

"You can't leave him out there to face that mob alone. You are the sheriff. You must preserve law and order."

"I reckon he kin handle them," the sheriff said with an odd slow note of relish in his voice.

"Argus with a mob!" I demanded sconfully, as I cried to force my way past his inexorable bulk.

"Why not?" the sheriff asked.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

THERE are riddles in Love's Land; who am I to read half their marvels, understand half their mystic creed? In Love's country, wide and fair, who am I to find half the beauties waiting there for my soul and mind? Who am I to climb the heights of each snowy crest? Who am I to drink delights, know this bright land's best? Softly, softly in Love's land I muse walk today, lest the glow on every hand fade too soon away! lest the lovely mess that gleams over all the place vanish, stripping hills and streams bare of magic grace! There are riddles in Love's land I can never grasp, yet venture with my soul safe in Love's clasp. Softly, softly I will go through Love's golden mass, well content if I but fold my happy years.

Of Gregory, as bitter as gall, flowed over Joslyn and she quivered. Fortunately, in the obscurity of the cab, Briehalter did not see her color.

They were again at her apartment house as on the previous occasion, he refusing to accompany her in the cab to the stairs. Rather than argue, Joslyn allowed him to walk up to her door. With the light in the hall she bade him goodnight.

"I want to see you again—soon," he said at parting.

"As long as you hold your present views I don't want to see you at all," she told him, firmly. "You're untwisting seeds of wickedness."

Abruptly, proudly, she was interrupted by an explosive, uncontrollable cackling from the inside of her apartment.

It was unmistakably a man's . . . Kevin's . . . voice.

"I thought you lived alone," Briehalter said, with a sudden sharpness in his tone.

"There's a man in there . . . so you've been stringing me along with all this virtue talk!"

Joslyn's face was hot and flushed, her voice unsteady.

"I have a wife," Briehalter declared, his words as hard as steel "I'm going through that door and see for myself, once and for all!"

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

THE newest of "formal dresses" are somewhat longer than street dresses. In the event that a person does not possess an evening coat and whose other coat is somewhat shorter than the dress, what do you advise? Would a shawl around one's shoulders be incorrect?

I THINK that you yourself have made the best suggestion—to wear a shawl, for shawls are now so fashionable, so comfortable, and so not indicate discrepancies in dress lengths. And also this year there are many charming models in scarfs of all kinds, and one of a golden tone in lace or chiffon or brocade or any other material is most appropriate and adaptable for all kinds of attires. And they are very simple and easy to make.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you kindly tell me which is more proper in a personal card: "Miss Mary Louise Henderson" or merely, "Mary Louise Henderson"? Is the latter considered informal or not proper?

A READER.

THE title "Miss" should always be omitted before the name on the card of an unmarried woman. Even quite young girls have—and correctly—the "Miss" on their cards

There is no question of informality in a visiting card. A visiting card is always a formal affair, and therefore the details on it should be carried out formally. The use of the title is one of those formal items. Another of these items is one that you correctly indicate in your question—the fact that the middle name should be written out, and not indicated by an abbreviation

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I HAVE been engaged to a young man who lives in a foreign country. After I came to America, he wrote to me every two weeks. In all his letters he told me how much he cared for me. He even planned to come over and marry me this month. I have been very happy with him three years and have been in love with him for years.

Suddenly, I stopped hearing from him. I think his parents are keeping my letters from him, for I am writing I am 23 and he is one year my senior. Surely he is old enough to do as he wishes. I know he wanted to come.

SEND him a registered letter, my dear, and arrange at the postoffice to have it delivered you informing you whether he received your letter. Tell him frankly how worried you are over his silence and ask him to let you know just how things are with him.

Ask him whether his silence means that he wishes to be released from the arrangement. If he doesn't feel differently, now that he has been away from you so long, the most humanly thing for you to do will be to release him. This seems the best answer I can give you. I do hold him if he has ceased to love you. In case he still cares, you will soon hear from him. I am sure. He may have arrived in America before you read these lines. I hope so, and that you will both be very happy.

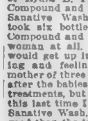
WOMAN COULD NOT SLEEP

Her Mother-in-Law Knew A Remedy



Mrs. Belle Thompson, of Georgia, was in a very weak and run-down condition for four years. She had great difficulty in getting to sleep at night and often she did not sleep soundly. She would wake up again and again. Besides this her appetite was poor "My mother-in-law told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash," she writes. "I took six bottles of the Vegetable Compound and it was not long before I was a well woman at all. I could sleep and would get up in the morning singing and feel fine. I am the mother of three children and always after the babies came I had to take treatments, but I can truly say that this last time I have only used the Sanative Wash. It does me more good than the treatments. It brings me on my feet to care for my children and I do most of my work. I feel it my duty to let you know how both of the medicines have helped me."—Mrs. Belle Thompson, R. 2, Rossville, Georgia.

MEDBURY SAYS---

SOME women aren't satisfied with making themselves attractive, they're even taking their dogs to beauty parlors

IT'S nothing to go into a fashionable salon and see a Pomeranian getting his eyebrows plucked

LAST month one woman spent over $200 in permanent waves for her Pekinese

SHE says she's going to take him back next week and have his pedigree marcelled

IN this hot weather it's wonderful for a mistress to treat her collie to a haircut and shave

ONE man came home the other evening and found that his police dog had a boyish bob.

THIS poor fellow's wife had even taken the Airedale downtown and had his nails manicured

SHE tried to beautify the dog by making him bury his bones in beauty clay.

EVERY morning she put his tail up in curling papers

THE Airedale was so pretty he was afraid to go out of the house.

HE didn't want the mongrels in the next block to smell the perfume on him

IT won't be long now before women will be taking their pets to barber shops

CAN you imagine a man having to get up and give his seat to a fox terrier?

A BARBER won't have to worry about his place of business going to the dogs. The dogs will come to his place of business

THESE tonsorial artists will make thousands of dollars rubbing tonic on Mexican hairless puppies

MANICURISTS will also become rich. A dog has twenty nails and a man only has ten

AND the former won't growl half as much as the latter.

WHEN the dog looks up into her face and smiles she'll know he means it. He won't want to take her out to dinner.

IT'S all right to beautify animals, but a woman shouldn't doll her dog up until he's better looking than her husband.

DAILY SHORT STORY

IT'S THE LITTLE THINGS THAT COUNT

By Jack Woodford

IT was evident from the start that Baroness Nicoul had decided to get the big American at all costs. A millione for herself. The fact that he was at present the owner of a wife in excellent health and spirits did not, apparently, worry the Baroness in the least.

Even the fact that, on one occasion that she had been alone with John Henderson in one of motor rides, he had shown most of the time telling her what a wonderful woman his wife was, did not discourage the Baroness, rather it showed her exactly what course to pursue in getting John Henderson for herself.

He was, as she figured it out beneath the smooth sheen of her jet black hair, the American type which Sinclair Lewis so capably painted in Babbitt. He was stupid, conventional, uxorious only to the degree that he believed his wife to be true to him.

Once he believed that she was not, it would be a different story, one in which the Baroness would pay a more desirable part.

That night at the dinner the Baroness arranged to have Archie Henderson, who she knew would do anything for her, sit at the same table with Mrs Henderson; she had in advance instructed Archie to be pointedly and conversational to Mrs Henderson—a thing not hard to do, since the American wife was a pretty little blonde with blue eyes and a skin that made Archie itch to touch it.

Naturally the Baroness caused John Henderson, whom she had maneuvered to another table in another part of the room, to see how attentive to Mrs. Henderson Archie was being.

Time and time again she observed to John Henderson how much fun Archie and Mrs. Henderson seemed to be having together, and when John Henderson would be looking around to watch them her deep brown eyes would glow, and she would think to herself:

"Ah, but could anything be more delightful than to be with a man who is so thoughtful of his wife's pleasure?"

What John Henderson actually was thinking would have amazed the Baroness considerably, and convinced her firmly that American husbands were even more stupid than they are painted, for as John Henderson watched his wife and Archie, he was thinking that she was treating him just precisely as she would one of her brothers.

Laughing with him, at him; having a good time, being a good scout—infatuated with him? nonsense. He was not in the least disturbed or worried, except over the fact that he had been put at a different table from his wife.

When the card games were over, the Baroness approached John Henderson and his wife as they stood talking in the corner.

"Oh, Mrs. Henderson," she begged with a pretty moue, "would you lend me your husband for just an hour? I want to talk over with him the advisability of purchasing a block of shares from being jealous watching his wife carry on as Mrs. Henderson is carrying on with Archie."

What John Henderson actually was thinking would have amazed the Baroness considerably, and convinced her firmly that American husbands were even more stupid than they are painted, for as John Henderson watched his wife and Archie, he was thinking that she was treating him just precisely as she would one of her brothers.

Laughing with him, at him; having a good time, being a good scout—infatuated with him? nonsense. He was not in the least disturbed or worried, except over the fact that he had been put at a different table from his wife.

When the card games were over, the Baroness approached John Henderson and his wife as they stood talking in the corner.

"Oh, Mrs. Henderson," she begged with a pretty moue, "would you lend me your husband for just an hour? I want to talk over with him the advisability of purchasing a block of government bonds that my broker is offering to me—it won't be more than an hour. I'll promise to return him to you safe and sound after that length of time has passed."

"Certainly," agreed Mrs. Henderson, "but I think I'll run along to bed."

John Henderson sighed; he, too, wanted to go to bed. He was bored stiff with the Baroness. Strangely enough he did not appreciate the exotic beauty that was hers at all.

In fact he was thinking that she looked bilious and needed a dose of calomel. He glanced at his wife's bright eyes, red lips and clear satin complexion, and regretfully wishing that he could leave the room with her.

For an hour John Henderson and the Baroness talked together in an alcove, and at the end of that time, he rose to go to his wife's room.

As he opened the door he heard a smothered masculine exclamation. A cigarette tip glowed in the dark.

Pulling out his automatic revolver with one hand and leveling it at the cigarette tip glowing in the darkness John Henderson turned on the electric light switch with the other hand.

A devastating tableau met his eyes. His wife was sitting up in bed, amazement written upon her features. Archie was sitting upon the edge of the bed, a three-quarters smoked cigarette jauntily held in his fingers.

For a long time nobody spoke; but at last Archie broke the silence.

"In this country, John Henderson," he said, "the authorities are very unsentimental about husbands who shoot their wives lovers—I should advise you to put up that gun."

"Certainly," smiled John Henderson. He walked over to Archie, looked at the cigarette, looked at his wife, smiled reassuringly at her, then walked around the room, looking at the floor, at the ceiling, everything.

At last he turned to Archie:

"Well, old man, I guess you better be leaving," he said jovially. He stretched out his hand for a good night handclasp. Archie's deadly [illegible] was a [illegible] sickening, crushing sound. Archie screamed and all but fell to the floor; when he withdrew his right hand from John Henderson a clasp it was a broken, crushed mass. He staggered, moaning, from the room.

"Get dressed," said John Henderson to his wife. "We'll leave this accursed house and this accursed country and go home. I'll charter an automobile and we'll drive to the seaboard tonight."

"John," she began tearfully, "I swear I don't know how it happened. I was asleep, when the light came on I woke up to see Archie and you in the room—I don't know how it happened. I don't think he was in here for more than a minute before you came though—please believe me, John—"

Her eyes and arms supplicated him and he smiled down warmly at her.

"Believe you? Of course I believe you. I'd believe you even if it were not for the fact that I know it to be impossible for a man to smoke three-quarters of a cigarette in a room without depositing ashes some [illegible] [illegible] was a [illegible] very."

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By Helen Rowland

THERE are two things which, somehow, always seem to spoil an attractive man—getting married and staying single.

A girl doesn't seem to feel that her life is complete, nowadays, unless she has at least four devoted men to play around her—and a husband as a sort of "spare."

* * *

Sometimes, a woman's vanity suffers a "blow-out" during the honeymoon; but usually it just seeps out gradually, where the tiny point of her husband's criticism is continually puncturing it.

If lovers should agree to leave out of their conversation all the nonsense, flattery and sweet lies, the silence between them would be almost as deadly as that between husband and wife.

* * *

Somehow, where two or more women are gathered together, the meeting always ends in a clinic on love, men and marriage.

It is possible, even in these days, to bring up a boy with good manners and a real chivalry for women—if you can manage to keep him away from the girls.

Of course, every man believes that happiness in this world comes from service to others; that is why he is so willing to make a woman happy by letting her do things for him.

* * *

Hints to the Summer hostess: You can always get something out of your week-end visitors—even if it is only material for an essay on "Ingratitude."

* * *

Judging from most week-end parties, the tired business man's hard work in the city lasts from sunrise Tuesday morning almost to sunset on Thursday evening.

FOR Sour Stomach PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

Better Than Soda

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentation in the bowels and gently urges this souring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

Try a 25c Bottle

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any druggists. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips since 1875.

POTATO CROP FINANCED IN BOSTON

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor.

Aroostook continues the greatest potato country in the world. The Maine crop is being financed again largely by Boston bankers, I hear.

Aroostook is setting another high mark. Walter R. Christie of Presque Isle has 1,200 acres planted to potatoes. He may market 120,000 barrels. This is a record potato acreage. A dispatch says new potatoes in Presque Isle retail at 55 cents a peck. They sell in Boston as low as 42 cents a peck.

Are the reported fears of Chairman Henry C. Attwill of the Massachusetts Public Utilities Commission that higher charges may come as a result of superpower development justified? Time alone will tell. In the meanwhile some of the so-called superpower stocks are selling considerably below their high prices for the year.

H. C. Attwill.

Many believe that lower charges to customers, rather than higher, are logically to be looked for. Martin Insull, the midwest "power king," threw the first monkey wrench into rising stock mrket prices for some of the "superpowers" when he was quoted as saying better than a 6 per cent. yield was not to be expected.

Anderson, vice-president, who has been located at the New York office, will make his headquarters at Chicopee Falls in charge of all tire manufacturing at both Chicopee and Cudahy plants.

Pres. Pearson of the New Haven Railroad has returned to New Haven from an extended trip in the West.

There is considerable interest in the proposed legislation to reduce interest charges on the railroads' debt to the government. This, if passed, will chiefly aid the New Haven and the St. Paul. The bill for the reduction of interest and the refunding and amortization of indebtedness of railroads to the government (S. 2929) was heard by the House Committee on Interstate Commerce, and favorably reported. An identical bill (H. R. 8708) was heard by the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce but has not been reported.

S. 2929 is before the Senate on the motion of its proposer, Senator Gooding, for consideration. It was laid aside on the evening of July the second because the Senate had unanimously agreed to proceed at 10 o'clock under another rule to consider unobjected bills and the intervening time had been taken up with irrelevant speeches.

FILM CONTEST TO BE BRIEF AND MERRY

theatres. If one of them is in your neighborhood, show your appreciation of the manager's neighborliness. These are theatres with something like public spirit. The Boston Evening American came into this contest at the invitation of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, the Will H. Hays organization. The theatres received the same invitation. We're all together.

Do not fail to look over the List of Titles and the Names of Movie Stars which will be found in today's Evening American. Somewhere amongst them are the name of the star and the title of the play featured in today's problem-picture.

HOLD YOUR ANSWERS.

Remember that Contest Pictures and solutions are NOT to be sent in before the close of the contest. Arrange them in order and send the twenty in at one time.

Be sure not to muff, not to skip, the clue printed immediately underneath the contest picture and the Special Clue which will be found at the bottom of the coupon. On some important occasion these clues, or one of them, may save the day and the bacon.

And DO have a brief talk with your regular newsdealer. It is important that you see the Boston Evening American every day, at least until the end of this wonderful competition. Tell the newsdealer so—and be happy!

Contest Picture No. 3 will be printed tomorrow.

EASTERN MASS. NEW STOCK ISSUE APPROVED

Department of Public Utilities approved issue by Eastern Massachusetts. He may market 120,000 barpar, at $30 a share. Chinese Lady and Actor

Their Dresses Almost Reconcile You to OUR Fashions

THIS HIGHLY DRESSED PERSON IS A MANCHU LADY DRESSED IN THE HIGHEST STYLE. HOW DO YOU LIKE HER?

THIS IS A CHINESE ACTOR WHO, APPARENTLY, HAS "GOT THEM ALL ON."

If you mourn over today's American fashions, the "folly of women as shown in the dresses they wear," etc., you may find consolation in these two pictures of Chinese costumes.

The Chinese actor's costume speaks for itself. The great Duse, marvelous Italian actress, one of the three greatest in a hundred years (they were Duse, Rachel and Bernhardt, two of them Jewesses by the way)—the great Duse said to Madame Galli-Curci that the art of acting is to "eliminate, eliminate and ELIMINATE.

This Chinese actor probably never heard of it. Young people, let these pictures teach you the importance of simplicity. This actor would be better, more pleasing if he would eliminate half his clothing.

The Manchu lady would look better, if she eliminated much of her clothing, and all of her paint.

Our American girls eliminate and simplify life. If they would all eliminate lip stick, rouge and cocktails they would be better in looks, charm and health.

Prohibition Booms Grapes

Ask California

San Francisco suggests that the national Democratic delegation from California may go for Governor Al Smith of New York and abandon William G. McAdoo.

If that should happen, it would not be because California is over-enthusiastic about Governor Smith's "WETNESS."

There is a practical side to everything in this world. Before prohibition came in California got from ten to twenty dollars a ton for grapes to be used in the manufacture of wine PROPERLY MADE. Now that prohibition is here, the same grapes sell for one hundred and fifty to two hundred dollars per ton, and are made into wine unskillfully, of inferior grades.

Prohibition has added many millions a year to the value of California's grape crop and California vineyards are increasing by thousands of acres a year. So far as profit goes, prohibition suits California.

'I DON'T KNOW' REAL TEST OF WISDOM

By DR. FRANK CRANE

JOHN S. FORD in "A Literary Workshop," says:

"There should be a university for the elderly, with an elective course for those old enough to know what they do not know and wise enough to know what they ought to know."

The rarest thing in the world is to find a man who knows what he does not know, or, rather, to draw the line sharply between what he knows and does not know.

Perhaps this is the truest test of wisdom.

The trouble with most of us is that we think we know a lot of things that are merely suppositions. The man who does not know a thing, who knows that he does not know it, and who does not pretend to know it, is a rare bird.

A true scientist is known by the quickness with which he say "I don't know."

The man with the fumbling mind, the average man, accepts a lots of things as facts which have not been proved.

Of course there are often a number of things that nobody can know and quite a number of things that anybody can know. It is in the borderland between these two points that confusion lies. From that borderland come most of our prejudices and ignorance and our stupid intolerance.

Much that is called faith is due to assuming the truth of things that cannot be known. It is much better to call our ideas about things mere opinions and not knowledge.

Science is constantly making inroads into the realm of the unknown, ever bringing unknown things into the region of the known. But there will always exist a vast sea of the unknown that cannot be reduced to exact information.

WHY YOU SHOULD NOT TALK ABOUT YOUR AFFAIRS

Perhaps you have been surprised and hurt because certain persons have tried to injure you while so far you cannot bring to mind any reason why they should desire to do so.

You are of a happy disposition, appear to have a fair share of this world's goods, and get a lot of enjoyment out of little things.

You will find that many persons are jealous of that happy way of yours and cannot bear to think that you have enough of health and trivial pleasures to keep you in that joyous mood which they never seem to have.

These persons will tell falsehoods about you and will try to blacken your reputation with those who think well of you.

Until you have had experience with such persons you will find it hard to imagine that there are such persons in the world, but there are many.

If you are wise, you will not tell too much about the good fortune you have, the success you may have attained in any line. It may excite envy and breed ill will among those who might want to do you damage.

It is best to keep your own business to yourself, anyway.

You like to tell about what you have attained.

It is not egotism on your part. It merely means that you are pleased and you want to tell some one about it.

You had better school yourself to keep quiet about yourself.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"BLESSED are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of Heaven."—Matt. 5-3.

It was a glorious rose sweet day, full of bussing adventures, and I was a cross little girl, sitting on the edge of a hard church pew, learning my "B'yatitudes."

Learning B'yatitudes was the last thing I wanted to do on that far away Summer morning. Privately, I thought B'yatitudes were dreary things, woefully lacking in spirit and spunk. That one about the "poor in spirit" was especially distasteful to me.

I did not believe in poor spirits. I disliked those who had them—spineless, whimpering, cowardly things! They reminded me of old Mrs. Huggins, who came to see mother and cried because her husband beat her. Wha'd she let her husband beat her for—the silly thing?

Pooh!—I wasn't going to let any ole husband beat me. I wasn't going to be poor in spirit, not for a hundred kingdoms of heaven. I was going to stand on my own hind legs and the world had better look out for itself—yes, siree!

So at last I went out into the bussing day, cut on my adventures, standing on my own hind legs and asking alms of no one.

Away I went, my head in the air and a fine conceit in my heart.

I'd show 'em!

And I did.

I'd show 'em.

I had youth, I had wit, I had courage and spunk, and pride like a bright-steel armor. And no more respect for law than a brisk young timber wolf.

She Was Rich

"Poor in spirit"—not by a thousand miles!

"I'm RICH!" I cried to the world. "I can fight my own fights. I can pay my own way. I can take what ever comes. Bring on your joy—bring on your risk—bring on your trouble.—"

"I can manage them all with one hand tied behind me!"

And I certainly seemed to be doing it. That's more, I was willing to manage other people's lives also. I didn't exactly say—

"Here, you poor simp—hand over your life to me an' see what a wonder I am, at fixing things."

I didn't exactly say that, but I went through all the gestures.

And of course, there were plenty of people who were willing to hand their lives over.

So I grew tall and fat in my own conceit. I was rich in spirit, not poor. Or so I thought. And I never bothered my head about the kingdom of heaven.

Then that which was dearer to me than life itself, dearer than even my own pride and strength, went from me.

Went out into the night, and I could not follow. Went off into some bright, peaceful, gentle land, far from the noisy, boasting land which I inhabited. And I could not follow.

Poor Now

I could not follow.

Then suddenly a terrible poverty came on me. What good was my strength then? Or my wit? Or my spunk? That hard, bright shell of my pride still held me up but under that shell I was empty—empty and poor. And there was no help in me for my own great hurt.

So because I would die if I did not find help, I turned to others.

I took up my beggar's bowl, like those ragged, humble men of the East, and I went out asking for help.

I was poor in spirit at last, and I held up my bowl to anyone who would give me cheer of hope or friendliness.

And behold, the poverty I had disdained, was like a new birth. And above the beggar's bowl a vision of the blessed beauty of man's love, and of the wonder of Godd's love for man.

This isn't an allegory. It's the truth about my life. It's the answer to that constant, bitter cry in your soul too—"Why CAN'T I be happy?"

Go out and be poor, my friend.

Stop fighting. Stop trying to build pride and power yourself. Go back to the beginning again and learn how to lean, and take, and share, as a little child—as a beggar.

It's the only way—the only way to be rich.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

A good man not only forbears those gratifications which are forbidden by reason and religion, but even restrains himself in unforbidden instances.—Atterbury.

We spend our days in deliberation, and we end them without coming to any resolution.—L'Estrange.

If we hope for things of which we have not thoroughly considered the value, our disappointment will be greater than our pleasure in the fruition of them.—Addison.

Though man's persons ought not to be hated, yet, without all peradventure, their practices justly may.—South.

To be happy at home is the ultimate result of all ambition, the end to which every enterprise and labor tends, and of which very desire prompts the prosecution.—Johnson.

Objects near our view are apt to be thought greater than those of a larger size that are more remote.—Locke.

Lives spent in indolence are therefore sad.—Cowper.

HEAVY BODIES ONLY SEEM HEAVIER

By Garrett P. Serviss,

"I have noticed that when a person is in a faint, or drunk, said person is very difficult to carry, and the body becomes very heavy. I would appreciate an explanation of the psychology of this.—T. J."

YOU are right in thinking that this is for psychology to expound. Mathematical physics would flatly tell you that a body does not gain weight by becoming limp, but psychology listens indulgently to your declaration that, whatever "laws" may say to the contrary, you can feel a difference.

And undoubtedly you do have to work harder in carrying a drunken man, or a partially filled sack of grain than in carrying a log of wood having precisely the same actual weight.

But the psychological explanation must, itself, be based on physics, for it is a matter of leverage and balance, and of the calling into play of generally unused or untrained muscles. A man working about a gristmill and used to handling limp burdens might find a log more troublesome to carry than an unconscious drunkard.

Seems Heavier

To you the one seems heavier, to him the other—there you perceive the psychic element. The "seeming" arises from the fact that many muscles and tendons are complaining of unaccustomed demands made upon them.

Your brain is somewhat bothered also, perhaps by anxiety, and surely by the multiplied attention that it has to give to unexpected and confusing details, which result from the awkward positions that you are forced to assume in bearing an unmanageable burden, and keeping it free from the ground.

You may be compelled to stretch yourself upward, or support the weight of an unusual height, thus increasing the expenditure of energy.

All this is elementary, but there is another consideration which may throw light on one of the standing enigmas of occultism, viz., "levitation."

You have doubtless heard it said that if a person stretches his body out horizontally, and keeps it in a rigid state, as, for instance, lying on his back with his head resting on one chair and his feet on another, he may be lifted shoulder high by a number of persons (usually four) who place their fingers underneath his sides and "raise" all together at a signal.

The required rigidity of the body is an indispensible condition; also the experimentes must breathe concurrently with the experimenters, and when, simultaneously, they all have a full breath, they must hold it in and "raise."

When all the conditions are faithfully fulfilled the results are often pronounced to be amazing. But, if the person to be lifted allows his body to become limp all the magic disappears, and the raisers cannot "levitate" him.

A great many people appear to believe that a mysterious decrease of weight occurs in this experiment. I have even read a report, purporting to be "scientific," in which it was affirmed that when the experiment was performed on a weighing platform the body suddenly lost a large, and measured, percentage of its normal weight.

HAS SEEN TRICK.

I have myself seen the trick performed, and the part that psychological deception plays in it, seems to me obvious, though many always declare themselves convinced that the phenomenon is the result of occult power.

Invariably when I have served as "subject," and have been lifted or partially lifted, it was perfectly evident to me that the pressure of the four pairs of fingers upon my sides exerted a force quite sufficient to raise my weight.

And yet the other participants (no doubt conscientiously) generally declared that they felt scarcely any weight, and did not press more than enough to keep the fingers in contact with the body.

Occasionally one or two would admit that they had used "OUTSIDE lifting force," but they thought, "not near enough" to produce the effect obtained.

Like hundreds of other human experiences, these things are all a matter of "mob-psychology." Spots of confusion in the laws of nature lets panic unseat judgment.

Three Minute Journeys

By TEMPLE MANNING

WE are continually hearing of the Bedouin of desert fame. We know him for the romance connected with him, for his marvelous horses, for his splendid horsemanship, and for his interesting nomadic life. But few of us have ever heard of his cousins, the fellahs or Arab farmers. The fellah is opposite in every respect from the Bedouin.

He lives a comparatively sedentary life, seldom or never moving from his farm, and he is a miserable horseman! Let me quote you a paragraph written by Rafael de Nogales, Venezuelan soldier of fortune, author, and Turkish divisional commander in the World War. This is what he says about the fellah:

"He submits his beasts to barbarous treatment, sometimes burdening and saddling them when fourteen or eighteen months old, which accounts for the number of defective horses with swaybacks and fallen croppers that one sees in Palestine and Syria."

We have also heard much about the marvelous horsemanship of the Arab himself. How often have we admired him, wrapped in his burnoose, astride his beautiful Arab steed, racing through the sands of the desert.

"In spite of their fame as born horsemen," writes Mr. De Nogales, "the Arabs in general ride badly, and they rarely master the rules of horsemanship. They have a bad seat and are unable to rise at the trot, and besides using very short, square stirrups, in which the whole of the foot fits, they employ iron ring bits, which spoil the mouths of their mounts, making them prance about continually from pure fear."

This rather shatters the romance and glamor that we have constructed around the persons of those Arabs, does it not?
